London, June 6.
This year's Hawthornden Prize will be presented on Tuesday next. What is undoubtedly our premier literary award was instituted in 1919 by Miss Alice Warrender. It is given for "a work of imagination by a British author whose age does not exceed forty-one."

I understand that the work which has most impressed the selection committee this year is Mr. James Hilton's very fine novel, "Lost Horizon."

This imaginative work presents the old problem of eternal youth in a new setting somewhere beyond the Himalayas.

Although several other works have been considered, I am, to use a topical expression, putting my money on Mr. Hilton's book.

Among the previous winners are Lord David Cecil, Mr. Siegfried Sassoon, and Miss Kate O'Brien. Miss O'Brien received the award in 1932 for her first novel, "Without My Cloak."

The value of the prize is £100.

A "GOOD THING."
There is one person who is certain which horse will win the Derby, and at first sight she would seem to be well qualified to give a tip.

This is Mrs. Clarke, the proprietress of the Downs Hotel, not fifty yards from the finishing straight. This will be her twenty-fifth Derby, though she has been in the hotel for even longer than that, as during the war substitute Derbies were held at Newmarket.

Actually, however, Mrs. Clarke has never seen the race, and though every kind of tip must have been discussed in her bar, she has never yet backed the winner.

Perhaps that is why she is being prudently secretive about the "good thing" she knows this time.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN'S HAND

As I indicated recently, it was obvious that President Roosevelt's acceptance of any compromise on war debts would be most unlikely to be ratified, and that the President himself, in view of the November Congressional elections, could not take such a course.

The view that the President himself would be pleased at a British point-bank refusal as the best way out of the war debts impasse receives partial confirmation from the fact that the Cabinet's decision was only taken after Sir Ronald Lindsay, our Washington Ambassador, had had an interview with him.

I understand, moreover, that the penalties of the Johnson Act will not affect Great Britain in the very slightest degree.

The papers on the War Debt were presented to Parliament by the Foreign Secretary, and the British Note to America bears the signature of Sir Ronald Lindsay. In both, however, those familiar with Mr. Neville Chamberlain's literary style and power of lucid argument will not find it hard to detect his hand in every line.

SIR AUSTEN'S MORAL SUPPORT

Sir Austen Chamberlain got an especially warm and sympathetic cheer as he limped with the aid of a stick to his place in the House.

This was his first appearance since his recent motor accident. Sir Austen has made a special point of being present on every important financial occasion since his half-brother became Chancellor of the Exchequer.

During the Budget, his moral support was confined to a Disraelian attitude on a back bench, his top-hat well over his eyes.

UP-TO-DATE ENGLISH

Lord Londonderry, who has been advising the young to revert to the purity of Shakespearean speech, knows as well as anyone how seriously it would embarrass the members of the Service of which he is the political chief if flying "shop" had to be talked in that medium.

"Stunt" and "zoom" are hardly Tudor expressions, nor, for that matter, are "formate" or "dope." Yet so far as I know there are no other words to express these various Air Force colloquialisms.

In some respects, however, the Air Ministry is conservatism itself. For instance, it rigorously bans the Trans-Atlantic word "airplane."

In its directions to civilian aviators it goes further, avoiding even the word aeroplane for the more classical expression "flying machine."

GERMANY'S FORMER CHANCELLOR

Dr. Bruening, the former German Chancellor, is now in England. He is here on a strictly private visit, staying with friends in Dorset.

When in office Dr. Bruening, though less successful at home-gained an influence in international politics that was the cause of Germany being conceded, on Dec. 11, 1932, the right to equality in armaments by her former adversaries in the war.

Herr Hitler, who, I believe, entertains a keen personal regard for the character and ability of Dr. Bruening, was at one time credited with the intention of offering him the post of Foreign Minister of the Reich.

But whatever the Chancellor's own feelings, party reasons made it impossible to overlook Dr. Bruening's attempt to suppress the Nazi storm-troops.

More unlikely things, however, might happen than Herr Hitler deciding to use Dr. Bruening's great diplomatic qualities.

One of these is unusual in a politician—a gift of periodic and prolonged silences.

TACT FOR THE TACTLESS

Walking round the West End is a uniformed interpreter employed by London Transport. He wears on his sleeve a number of tiny flags each representing a language which he speaks.

One language is honoured by three flags: "Red, black and yellow" of the Republic to soothe exiles; "red, white and black" of the Empire to placate supporters of Hohenzollern Germany; and a black swastika in a white circle on a red background to satisfy Nazi enthusiasts and believers in the Third Reich.

The most susceptible and least tactful nation in the world should feel touched by this diplomatic solicitude.

HENDERSON MAY RESIGN

Threat Follows Snub From Barthou

(Special Air-mail Service)

London, June 6.
M. Barthou, the French Foreign Minister, wholly rejected Mr. Henderson's resolution to an immediate adjournment of the Disarmament Conference.

Mr. Henderson threatened to resign his position as President of the Conference. These were yesterday's issues at Geneva.

Impartiality Impugned

Mr. Henderson said he was prepared, if his impartiality was impugned, as M. Barthou had implied in his speech, to hand over his charge to those who had appointed him.

It was hoped that the resolution Mr. Henderson submitted to the Bureau of the Conference would provide a solution to the present deadlock.

He suggested that the Russian proposals regarding a change of name of the conference should be submitted to the Governments for consideration.

Mutual Assistance

The resolution further suggested that the question of pacts of mutual assistance might advantageously be dismissed between the various parties interested in these regional agreements, the result of such discussions being afterwards communicated to the President of the Conference.

The resolution established that possibilities of reaching an agreement were offered by the proposals contained in the memorandum of the four Powers, namely the French memorandum on January 1, the Italian of January 4, the British of January 29, and the German of April 16.

It therefore suggested that this matter be referred back by the General Commission to the Bureau for examination with a view to the reconciliation of the views of the parties concerned.

It authorised the President to keep in touch with these negotiations and convene the General Commission when he deemed that they had progressed sufficiently to allow of a fruitful decision.

From a studio at Broadcasting House, London, the voice of Sir Holton Eyres-Monsell was transmitted by underground cable through the international trunk exchange to the Rugby wireless station and thence by short wave to Tokyo over the experimental radio channel.

The reception was perfect.

ATMOSPHERE WORSE THAN THAT OF CINEMAS

Mr. Ormsby-Gore, First Commissioner of Works, replying to a question in the House of Commons recently, said a very comprehensive engineering report on the subject of the ventilation of the House of Commons was presented to Parliament in June, 1931, and this report was still available.

He recently had analyses made of the air in the Chamber at different times of the day. He was further carrying out a similar but more complete survey of the ventilation of the whole building, as the result of which he hoped it might be possible for some more definite conclusions to be reached.

Asked if he was aware that the atmosphere of the House compared very badly with that of any cinema in the country, Mr. Ormsby-Gore said that was his own impression, but all the scientific and technical experts who were investigating the matter had found to the contrary.

Lady Astor: Is it true that it is the mentality of the House that is sometimes oppressive and not really the atmosphere? (Laughter).

No answer was returned.

ROUND THE SHOPS

There is nothing more annoying than an uncomfortable pair of shoes, not only it is annoying but it also spoils one's feet which is even worse.

Lane, Crawford's have some extremely smart foot wear, especially their white kids. These shoes are not only smart looking but very reasonably priced at $19.50 only this style has the perforated front with a nice high heel. In another the front of the shoe is of white stitching.

Both these models are extremely comfortable and I would highly recommend them. Then they have several other styles in white buckskin, trimmed with black in one style and brown in another. The blue sandal shoe that was on display was also very attractive and I would say they look cool as well as comfortable.

Then there are the beach sandals which are priced at $4.75 and are in many shades.

NICE HATS

Maizee's: Has the nicest shipment of hats that I have seen for a long time, in straws, fabrics, and light weight felts and there are some of the darker tones, that would wear right into the next season as they are absolutely the latest in style. Their silk suits are the last word in smartness and wearing service, as the materials are so good. Most of them are washable and the coats which does not cost any more, should prove most useful, especially when it gets cooler again and also for chilly evenings. So if you are really interested in silk suits, Maizee's would be the place to pay a call and I am sure you will not leave without one or "Maizee's Suits" with a swagger coat which is always useful and "Smart Looking"

EVENING DRESSES

Rivelle: Has a very nice assortment of organdie evening dresses, in various shades and very smartly cut and made up. There are shades to suit all tastes "Many styles in all black and black and white and for the younger set shades in lemon and another in mauve cut and made up to suit the girlish figure to an advantage.

FABRICS IN FULL BLOOM

(Special Air Mail Service)

L. London, June 8. Summery frocks and hats worn by 1934 London debutantes point to the fact that fashion creators have "tuned in" their designs for this season to the colours of flowers now rioting in meadow, wood and garden.

The effect of flowers on fashion is remarkable. Field flowers and orchard blossom, and the highly cultivated garden blooms have all been brought into play by present-day designers of fabrics. There are patterns in all-over, printed silks that might well have been inspired by sunshine playing on the scattered pink petals of a late cherry tree carpeting the fresh green of orchard grass.

There are other, heavier crepe de Chines printed in brilliant colours on a dark background in ordered patterns that might have been evolved from a vision of a bed of tulips in the park.

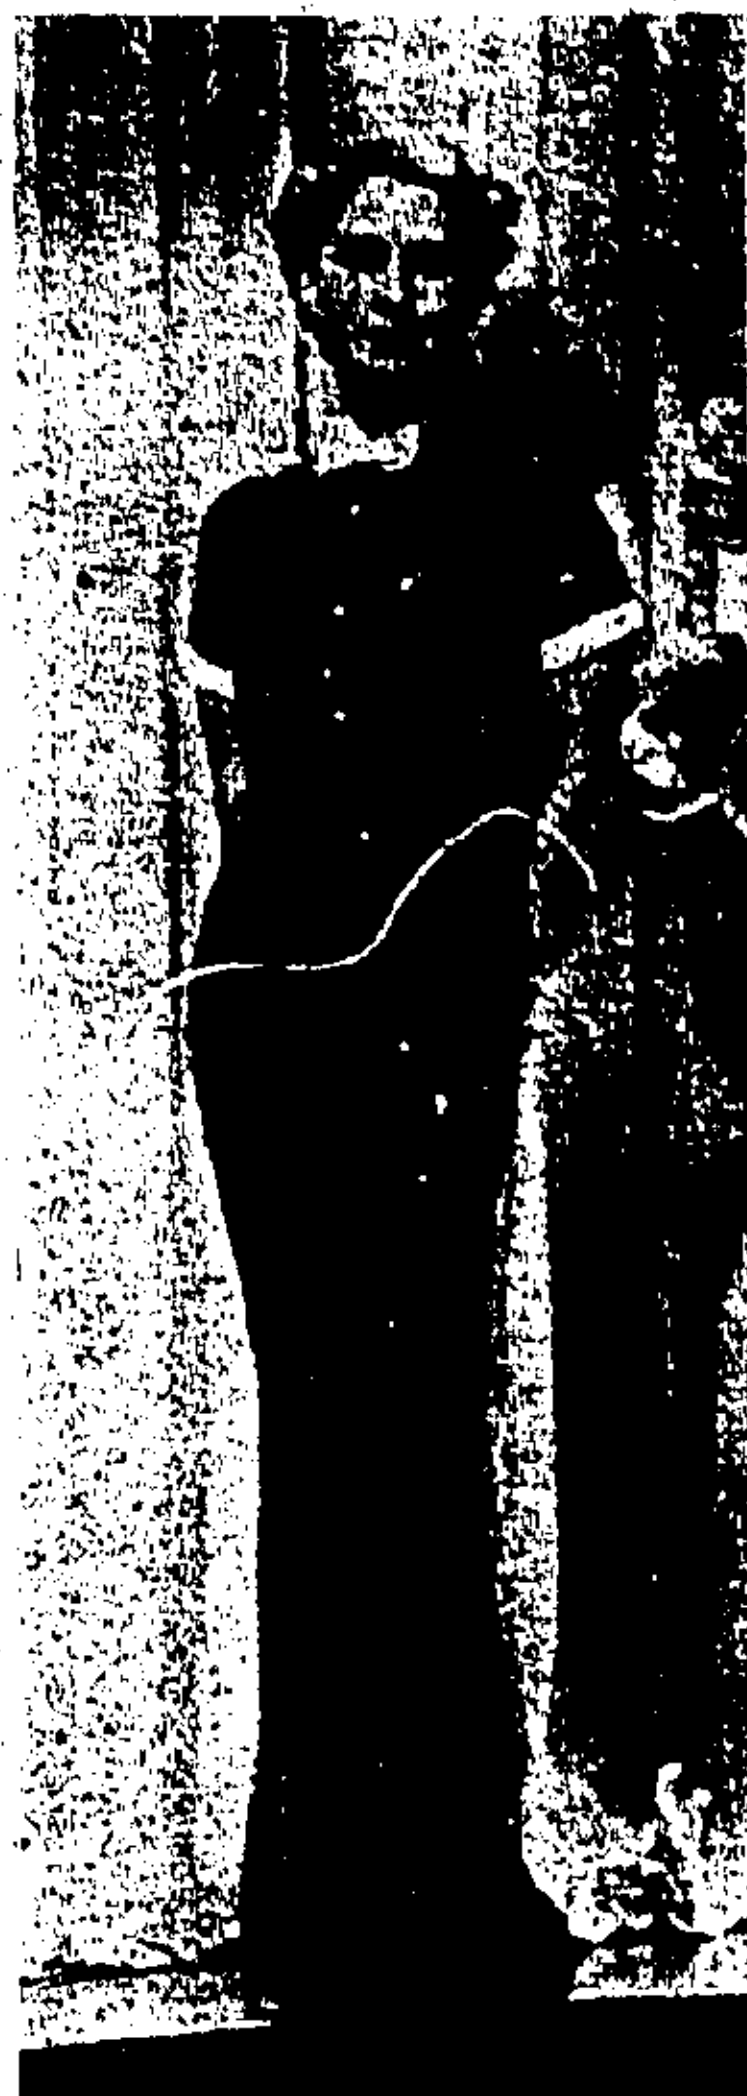

One sees the blue of the iris and paler forget-me-not, the golden gleam of the marsh marigold, the queer pale green off white of the hedgerow wild pansy in the new colourings of the popular linen tweeds.

Organdie is a flower-like fabric in itself. Here one finds many of the dainty flower colours, and the delicate tints of wild roses, the deeper tones of the roses of June are often brought into the embroideries which are used to adorn this material.

The general trend of these flower designs in all kinds of dress fabrics is interesting. There is no niggardly touch about these back-to-Nature materials. They are as lavish as Nature itself in colours and orderly design. Patterns are free and flowing, with glimpses of cleverly contrasted background here and there.

Printed chiffons, crepes, satins show the flower influence. Richer brocades are designed on the same lines with interwoven gold or silver threads. There are softly finished, lightly woven summer tweeds in flower tints. Knitting and crochet wools for

The formal frock of sequins with high neck-line and white lingerie touches.

A dramatically new fashion combination for evening wear shown in this mided black sequin frock with formal train, the neckline high about the throat and cap sleeves accentuated with the tailored white lingerie from the personal wardrobe of Norma Shearer, the beautiful M-G-M star.

CURLS

Curls—golden, silver and copper curls—peeping out from under great shady summer hats or perky set-on-the-side caps; curls that have never a hair out of place; that are soft as a baby's and yet utterly sophisticated—how are they achieved?

Well, here is the secret of curls, or perhaps I should say "secrets," for there is more than one important factor in the mystery of curls on heads that Nature bestowed with only the lankest locks.

The first step for the woman who wishes to wear her hair in curls is to have it cut with that end in view—by an expert.

If she has long hair she must explain to the hairdresser that she wants it to be cut for curling. He will then reduce it in length to about three inches from the hair-line at the neck. Next he will take small sections and taper them to lengths varying from one to three inches. This will provide uneven ends that will curl naturally or artificially as the case may be.

If the hair is already short it must be grown to the desired length—three inches—and then "cut for curling." Those magic words are really the main secret of a successfully curly coiffure.

In the same way, you should explain your purpose when you are having your hair permanently waved. The hair will then be baked a little longer, at the ends than on top. This will make the ends tightly waved, while the top falls in soft undulations.

Wash and Wave

A really first-class permanent wave is essential for a successful head of curls.

After a permanent wave, the hair should be shampooed and set again within a week. If there is considerable dryness, a nightly massage with a little warm almond oil is helpful.

Hair worn in curls must be shampooed every fortnight, but may, with advantage, be set in between the shampoos as well.

summer jumpers and sweaters are dyed in love-in-a-mist blues, buttercup yellows, pale rose and other flower colours.

Women's ever-growing interest in flowers, the abundance of floral display, fostered largely by the Horticultural Society and modern gardening methods of "tuning" the flowers to harmonious colour schemes, no doubt has much to do with the present-day influence of flowers on so many phases of fashion.

NAYLOR'S SALE

Miss Naylor is very wise in having her special sale now as this is the time when one is buying summer wear and not towards the end of July and August.

Very smart and good looking dresses are to be had from $7.50 up. It is even cheaper than getting a tailor to make a frock and then you would not get the style that these little American frocks have. This week end she is expecting another little shipment of goods, especially afternoon dresses, and may be evening dresses as well in silks and other washable materials.

THE LITTLE FOLKS

Mayo's are catering for the little folks as well as the grown ups and have in just now a number of pretty little silk frocks with embroidery and smocking. As usual they are always ready to remodell your old hat for you.

WASHING GLOVES

Eve has just received a very nice assortment of washing gloves in all the latest styles and shades. With the gauntlet finish in organdie and also in colours which are very attractive going with dresses same colour. Different styles to be had in fine muslins and organdies, others in lace and set.

PARADISE FOR WOMEN

Eunice is making a special reduction of 20 per cent. for cash, which makes her prices quite the most reasonable in town. Charming cut-summer frocks, light swaggy coats—delicate blouses—and an ever-changing array of smart hats, make this salon a paradise for the smart woman who wants to look her best without being frivolous or wasteful. Now is certainly the time to save money, the time to swallow oneself of "Eunice" quality—her gowns—were never prettier than they are now—and never more conservatively priced.

LONDON FASHION NEWS

The Ascot Brim Hats for Ascot are made of black lace or chalk white straw with very wide brims and little pot crowns that are snorter than ever, in fact, they just sit on the head, but it is amazing how comfortably. Even without the elastic grip they seem to perch safely, and look very smart. The white straw brim with a black lace crown has a short black lace border dipping at a short depth all round the edge of the brim.

Mode for Tall Women. Tall women look their best in the tunic of cut-to-the-knee length. It is a charming means of introducing colour contrast into practical and pleasing street ensembles. Very new models have the long three-quarter length coat and a slim skirt in navy or black wool and silk fabric. This is worn with a long tunic blouse which can be as decorative and gay as the wearer desires. Apart from a glimpse of bold bows and cravat, and a fantastic under-cuff the street suit reveals little of the variety of colour beneath, but this can be picked up again in a charming multi-coloured hain, with a dainty brim and possibly a crown of flower and feather of gay hue to match the tunic blouse.

The dressmakers insist on bows—bows of such dimensions that they almost conceal the neck, the shoulders, or the décollete. This fashionable trimming can be arranged in many effective ways on frock or blouse, and lends itself in particular to the taffeta vogue of the moment. Talking taffeta, taffeta coats, short or long, are undoubtedly playing an important part in fashion. In bright colours or white, they also appear in the evening. The best models, however, though feminine and picturesque, are by no means exaggerated. This is fortunate, as taffeta, directly it assumes a somewhat dressy air, is apt to be ageing, as, indeed, is the case with all modes that stress more elaborate styles. The quaintly ruffled or pleated taffeta cape in any colour can give new life to a printed crepe or plain chiffon frock. It can lie on one shoulder or fall down the back, finishing in a large bow to correspond.

Mid-Season Clothes For The What The Well-Dressed Woman Is Doing

Evening

Although most dressmakers are concentrating on day-time clothes in their mid-season shows, paying special attention to sports and cruising outfits, several of the smart salons have held displays of evening gowns during the last week.

Probably the range of materials regarded as suitable for evening wear has never been so varied as it is this year.

"Little Frocks"

Some dresses are quite frankly made of cotton—muslins soft or stiffened, laces plain or printed, cotton nets, cotton voiles. They are as simple in style as they are in fabric, but the muslin ones in particular are charming, with their drooping bodices, full flounced skirts, and broad sashes tied in huge bows at the back. The linen models are more "tailored" in style, the trimly moulded skirts, plain bodices, and quite wide shoulder straps. Nets and voiles must necessarily be made up in rather fluffy fashion, and again you get the frills and flounces, and the charmingly demure corsage of Victorian inspiration.

Silk Dresses

Then we have what I call the "simple silk dresses"—in various crepes, satins, georgettes and tulle—made, on more or less picturesque lines. The long skirt kind of glorified cape, put on back to front over a moulded foundation of white satin. It comes high in front, and low at the back where it is caught down to the lining with a blue enamel clip.

The lace frock must be included in this group, and one charming model specially mentioned. It is black—anything more useful and becoming than the black lace dress?—and the lace is slightly stiffened, so that the slashed sleeves stand out just above the elbows in petal-like flutes. Some more daring petals decorate the front of the bodice, and at the waist is a black velvet sash, shaped to come down over the hips at the sides and fastened with a jade buckle in front. I like the defiant touch of green on the woman who can carry it off.

Rich maroons and remains are used for some lovely statuesque gowns, cut on perfectly plain Princess lines. Blue tones figure among them, and there is a shade of rather dark green which looks extremely well in these rich materials. I like white, too, for the woman who carries it off.

I must tell you of a dress made entirely of wide black satin ribbon, the bands joined with bar-stitching in silver thread, and sewn with silver sequins. The sequins do not completely cover the ribbon, by any means, but arranged to look like groups of stars here and there. It is a clever gown. The ribbon is joined on the diagonal for the skirt, and the bodice is made of four widths—two in front and two at the back—with pointed top edges which are caught by narrow black shoulder straps.

A lovely dance dress made for a Society bride was carried out in ice-blue chiffon, the bodice draped halter-wise, and the skirt, rather fuller than usual, dotted over with dark blue applique velvet sash outlined the waist, and was fastened with a row of four ice-blue glass buttons.

Dress Magic In Inches

(Special Air-Mail Service)

London, May 23.

For some time past there has been the tendency to wear lighter and contrasting tops with dark skirts. This vogue is extending into the summer collections, and there are already a number of loose sac coats in white silk and in wool; also in printed crepes and some for semi-evening wear in damask and printed tulle. They are worn over plain dark skirts of wool.

This wonderful variety of coats will be more popular than the capes. To be able to have a sleeve is a more comfortable fashion, and more practical for our climate, by day or evening. There also seems a desire for the fitted, or semi-fitted, 1880 jacket, which though quaintly old-fashioned, when in black tulle and bordered with a ruche or gauging of satin can, in modern hands, be very smart. These jackets are mostly cut well over the hips, but are worn shorter than the tunic, which is best when it just clears the knee.

Let The Figure Decide

I am always interested in the question of lengths, whether it be for a coat or skirt, or warp of any sort. Women do not sufficiently understand that all great dress artists—though they may tell their clients the number of inches decreed by fashion—realise that this is largely an individual dress point. The proportions of the wearer, style and certain characteristics should influence the choice. It is startling to see how women will suddenly appear slim and tall instead of short and stout. If the matter be carefully looked into, it will be discovered that the changed appearance is largely a question of clever arrangement of lengths, which can be carried out without much departing from the current mode.

I remember a genius in the dress world of pre-war days asserting that certain types should wear skirts to the calf, and coats to the hips; that the long three-quarter coat should have a skirt nearly ankle-length, but caught in and not fluted. This was the tube-silhouette, which was slim and becoming, after many folds of fabric flapping round the ankles.

Summer-time fashions, from printed satin and silks, sequins and lace evening frocks, to Ascot outfits of white stiffened lace, or tulle and organdie in navy and white, hold London's shop-lane.

Sometimes summer frocks of patterned voile or organdie have wreaths of artificial flowers on the shoulder or nuchal drapery. Huge hats, blossom trimmed, share fifty-fifty favour with small straw and silks and fabric models. Some small hats have dainty feather shaded crowns to match parasols similarly shaded.

Bows and cravats, frilled and spotted, but "all fancy" are a great vogue; so are mock fronts and scarf blouses and open work jumpers of all materials, knitted or else patterned satins and spotted muslins.

The white suit of fancy pique is tailored; the white dress severely cut, with a belt coarsely knitted, riven through the girdle.

Peak caps of knitted wool in open work patterns can be stitched on to naval-looking yachting caps. Linen handbags, are as useful as they are smart, and white is as favoured for "dress" handbags for day-time as it is going to be as summer proceeds for the smartest of shoes.

All manner of lavishly befrilled tulle or organdie capelets and shaded boas of organdie are being worn for evening. Sometimes this fancy is varied by little coats of net with hand-made applique roses to trim them.

In a great measure all the innovations of late regarding contrast in colour and fabrics and the changing of lengths to suit the style and requirements of the individual, make for the general well-dressed appearance of debutantes and their chaperons. The sudden shortening of the tailor-made too is a good change providing the movement is not too exaggerated.

The shorter skirt should follow automatically in the wake of the many little short jackets that are popular. The sac-kind of coat just reaches to the waist, whilst the more sporting cardigans and the old-world shaped jacket fit well over the hips. There are just a few fly-away monkey jackets, in some sumptuous material, others are in white pique.

London

New York

Paris

True to tradition, this year's "debs" in common with their predecessors, hold the opinion that it's wise to be sophisticated, but not so wise to look it.

Evening ensembles are so demure that they'd make a crinoline blush for shame. Most of the dresses are in floral tulle or amusing crinkled cottons and supported by capelets or "monkey" jackets of plain tulle.

High waists are back again, and sashes and many of the skirts are gathered towards the back in bunchy folds or rather more dashing fan-tails. Apple green, Colonial peach, egg blue and pink are here in big numbers.

Sports clothes for the country clubs and resorts have arrived on a wave of white, and it really is white in its most dazzling form.

One of the favourite materials is a roughish cotton, and it is fashioned into jaunty little jacket suits. Sailor kerchiefs provide bright splashes of colour in red, blue or emerald a bib in the front, and they tie in a bow at the back.

The silks are favourites for day-time dresses, which are cut to cling to the figure and are often trimmed with elaborate frills to form berthe shoulder lines. The hems have deep pleated flounces.

Natural grey alpaca is used for slenderly-cut tailored ensembles trimmed with broad black patent leather belts and huge patent leather buttons. Wide, flat brimmed sailor hats complete the scheme.

BUTTONHOLE BLOOMS

(Special Air-Mail Service)

London, June 6.

For personal adornment of children, and gardenias are the most fashionable selection, with carnations as a good runner-up. These are particularly good as they retain their freshness throughout a day or evening, and the commercial orchid, too, is practically without perfume, so will not prove overpowering either to the wearer or her near neighbour.

Practically any flower may be worn, but roses are not advised as they soon begin to take on a faded appearance. Shoulder sprays look well for day functions, while corsage sprays and necklaces may be worn in the evening.

Fashions are at their best now in Paris. Beauty of cut is matched only by the lovely designs of the materials.

Yesterday at the Ritz I saw a charming outfit, the elegance of which was largely due to the material, which was of white tulle, irregularly chequered in black and white with a discreet interweave of gold thread.

The short sleeves were made of a flounce, gathered at the upper part to form a kind of corolla, while a short cape, with similarly flounced border, matched the dress.

Near by I noticed a well-known Parisienne in a smart tailor-made suit in soft twilled silk, a kind of surah, the colour being a natural string shade.

Both skirt and jacket (with the exception of the sleeves) had an all-over effect in vertical flat pleats.

All over the jacket the pleats were bound by decorative lozenge-shaped stitching, and it was fastened from top to bottom with large crystal buttons. The collar, high in the front, was formed of a big, pleated ruche of the same material as the suit.

Perhaps the most amusing fantasy, and certainly a very charming one, was a tailor-made costume almost severely classic in cut and line, but made in a delightful flowered silk material.

Walnut Novelties

Fun can be had over an after-dinner dessert by providing guests with walnuts, cloves, nutmegs, fruit-jubes and tooth-picks, and inviting them to make "tortoisles" as follows:

Shells the walnuts carefully so as to preserve the shells in equal halves. Take a fruit lozenge, and stuff it into the half-shell. If you have provided the right sized sweet it will just fill the shell. Stick a wooden tooth-pick right through the lozenge so that the ends stick out below the walnut shell when it is inverted. Now stick a raisin upon one end for a head. The other serves for the tail. Remove the small balls from the cloves so that the points look like claws. Stick four cloves into the lozenge to serve as feet.

This amusing novelty will also appeal to children at a family gathering.

GARDEN PRINTS

(Special Air-Mail Service)

London, June 6.

When summer frocks "say it with flowers," garden prints have it all their own way. They have never looked lovelier. On the whole motifs are small, and until recently the "pansy" in either two or more natural colours on a light ground won my heart. Bruyere has now caught me in a coil for bolder colours—still on dark backgrounds, such as black and navy—or the hue that rests between it and royal blue.

Not only do these dark grounds stress the latest note in elegance for smart occasions, but they seem to bring with them a superior slimming influence beneath splashes of colour in a new red called "minium." Asiatic yellow, and a vivid green between grass and emerald. Imagine the gaiety of a small garden print in this new red and green mixed with white on a dark blue ground.

Then there is a holly leaf print on black with a red button shoulder fastening. "Minium" is somewhat paler than lacquer, in fact it is the red lead tint used as a basis when lamp posts are destined to be refreshed by a new coat of paint.

"Asiatic" means an intense yellow that spreads into a narcissus print mingled next white on a dark blue ground. This is made up with dainty narrow gros-grain belts and neckties of the plain yellow.

These belts surmount the new idea on wrapover skirt lines. They are cut on the bias with the overlap taking a diagonal line from one hip to the centre front. A reverse movement occurs when "minium" red is used for a plain frock of crepe "Hawaia." The bodice fastening commences the diagonal fastening on to buttons that tone from one shoulder to just beyond the centre front when a straight line takes the wrapover on to a few more buttons and then veers off in a corresponding sense to the bodice.

A new fashion for composition clips is the scarlet poppy and marguerite one which sometimes forms a motif at high neck and waist line on white frocks. They look charming, too, on a navy blue and white spotted "Chine" model clamped back to back, as it were, and perching slightly away from the outline.

There is a burnish silver, metal marguerite as well that forms the only motif at the high neckline of a dress and crown of a hat. The fern-like leaf of metal takes the form of a belt buckle to correspond with a high neckline fastening.

Fastenings become more and more original with pale white hands gripping a coat of navy blue down the centre front and square buttons lashed to jackets through two big holes by a contrasting coloured leather thong. Round leather buttons are another invasion, and they look saddler-made with embossed edges rising beyond a round of white machine stitching. Talking of invasions, brown with white is liable to encroach on touches of black and navy, since the alliance won renown with a first prize at the Ambassadeurs in a concours de la "Femme elegante et son chien," a prelude to the "Grande Semaine" when race meetings illuminated by flood lighting are anticipated at Longchamp.

BING CROSBY

And Some Cactus Apples

The next time Bing Crosby sees one of those attractive little buds growing on cactus plants, he'll know better than to eat it.
Crosby, on location with Director Norman Taurog's troupe at Catalina Island, filming Paramount's new South Sea Island adventure film, "We're Not Dressing," showing at the Alhambra Theatre, decided to do a bit of exploring.
He returned from the island hills in an hour and quietly asked

"BOLERO"

The Charleston Revived

George Raft, starred in Paramount's "Bolero," coming on Sunday to the King's Theatre, who first tasted international fame as a dancer, has found that dancing is a tougher job than sparring with Bowery pugs at a dollar a round, a danger he once tasted.
Even the four-day routine of his first vaudeville experience was restful, by comparison with the eight hours of hoofing he did before the sound cameras for his role in this picture, in which he is starred: Carole Lombard, Sally Rand the Fan Dancer, Frances Drake and Gertrude Michael are featured.

A veteran of dozens of ring battles and several years of semi-professional baseball before he became a professional dancer, Raft during the strenuous work of production, was near collapse, from hoofing, the one job he had previously thought was easy.
The story, "Bolero," demands the star's performance of every known variety of dancing. In addition to an assortment of polished ballroom exhibition numbers, Raft revives the sizzling Charleston he made famous. And the climactic dance of the picture, interpreting Ravel's famous composition is a savage, intricate creation that required days of shooting for its various movements.

This dance for the screen, with its reckless and repetitions for unusual camera angles, brought Raft's total to more than 170 hours of dancing, during twenty days of production.
"Another week of this," Raft said, "And I would have been in prime condition for six-day bicycle race."
"Bolero" is the dramatic romance of a gay, carefree youth conceived and ruthless, who rises to fame as a dancer by means of a ladder of women's hearts.

A DREAM FARM

Louise Dresser's Ambition

Louise Dresser entertains an original and unique idea of what she intends to do when she retires from the screen: She gave voice to it while on location at Riverside, California, with the "David Harum" company, following a fruitless search for her maid.
"I hope and pray," she said, "that I shall live to see the day when I'll be rich enough to divorce myself from all my servants and do my own work."
"I pride myself on being a good cook and I'm not afraid of housework. I like to putter in the garden, too. So I've decided not to wait until my career on the screen is at an end to find a place where I can realize my dream of being without servants."

"For more than a year I have been looking for a small ranch in southern California. So far, I've been unsuccessful in discovering one that appeals to me."
"I shall keep on searching and when I find the right spot, I'll try to buy it. Then I shall feel secure and my dream of the sublime in happiness will be born."
"This doesn't mean that I shall retire from my chosen profession in the near future. I hope, as I said before, to accumulate enough wealth to afford to quit and fire all my servants before I settle down on my dream farm where I shall be happy in doing my own work."

"David Harum," Fox Film starring Will Rogers, is showing at the King's Theatre to-day.

the makeup girl for a pair of tweezers and a mirror.
Carole Lombard, peeking from around a corner, solved the mystery.

On Crosby's tongue and the sides of his mouth were stuck forests of tiny bristles. These bristles grow in minute bunches on what westerners know as cactus apples.

Bing, who likes his apples, picked one of them and ate it, but forgot to peel off the layer that was covered with "fuzz."
Director Taurog had to wait half an hour for Crosby to complete his "operation" and get in front of the camera to record a singing sequence.

George Burns and Gracie Allen, Ethel Merman and Leon Errol are also featured

MANNERISMS OF THE STARS

Clark Gable likes to cut on a small piece of wood with a knife, until it is whittled away to nothing.

When using a guitar in a picture, Ramon Novarro idly strums chords up and down the full scale of the instrument.

If Robert Montgomery can find a paper clip on the set, he bends it into all sorts of odd shapes. He continues to mangle the clip during tense scenes, until it breaks.

Marion Davies has a small leash for her dachshund, which she wraps and unwraps around her wrist.

Jeanette MacDonald crumples cigarette packages into small lumps which she throws at unsuspecting friends on the set.

Myrna Loy clasps and unclasps her hands with an emotion that is not otherwise noticeable.

SO LONG HONG KONG

"Fantasies Of 1934"
at the Queen's

It is an acknowledged fact that all good things come to an end all too soon. The same is the case with the Marcus show. It seems that it was only yesterday that they made their initial appearance in Hong Kong and now they are presenting their final number, "Fantasies of 1934."

"La Vie Parisienne" was good: "Broadway Merry-Go-Round" was better and it would be no exaggeration to say that "Fantasies of 1934" is the best of the lot.

As mentioned in these columns before, the stage setting and the costumes that one sees in the Marcus Show are the proverbial things of beauty and really the numbers, every one of them, are very smartly put over. The Bounding All Babes were again in fine form last night while "Palais de Femmes" was very prettily presented.

The Company gave something really original in "So Long Hong Kong" and in this connection it is to be hoped that when this troupe does leave, they will only be saying "au revoir" and not good-bye for although we do have our share of entertainment here in Hong Kong, it is not often that we have such a talented Company in our midst.

For those who saw the first two shows given by Marcus, we recommend a visit to the third, "Just to see something better" while for those who have not yet made their acquaintance with this Company, we also recommend a visit to the Queen's for it may be a long time before another show like this comes to the Colony.

SHEARER'S LATEST

"Riptide" A Huge Success

With Robert Montgomery and Herbert Marshall sharing leading man honours, one of the most impressive casts ever assembled is seen in support of Norma Shearer in "Riptide" her glamorous new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring vehicle which comes on Sunday to the Queen's Theatre.

Montgomery, playing the part of Miss Shearer's play-boy, sweetheart, makes his fifth appearance with the star in this film. He also played with her in "Their Own Desire," "Divorcee," "Strangers May Kiss" and "Private Lives." His last roles were in "Fugitive Lovers" and "Mystery of Mr. X."

Marshall, popular English stage and screen star, was last seen in "The Solitaire Man," and "Four Frightened People." He plays the part of Lord Rexford, Miss Shearer's husband, in the new film.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell, one of England's most distinguished actresses, famous for her great triumphs in "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," and other famous hits, makes her screen debut as Aunt Hetty, eccentric dowager. Lilyan Tashman plays the part of Miss Shearer's sister, Skeets Gallagher is cast as Montgomery's chum and other famous personalities included in the cast are Ralph Forbes, Arthur Jarrett, Earl Oxford, Helen Jerome Eddy, George K. Arthur and Baby Marilyn Spinnert.

Edmund Goulding wrote and directed the new Shearer production, a sensational triangular romance with a smart Continental background.

ECHOES OF 1861

25—The Parade Ground On Band Afternoon.I am a constant attendant at the Parade ground on Wednesdays and Fridays in the afternoon, the days on which the Bands play. I never miss, for I enjoy the music, and I enjoy seeing the people. I am generally there before the music begins, and I always stay until it is over, so that I think I am entitled to speak of what I see upon those occasions.First comes a man, one of the Bandmen generally, with a lot of music stands, these he places where they are to be, to the open-mouthed astonishment of a pack of children, who, with their nurses, are at that hour the sole occupants of the green. They watch the man while he puts the books in order and gets all ready for the Band, they wonder what is coming next, when at last the man seats himself down on the edge of the drum stool they fancy the fun is over and scamper away in a body, shouting and laughing to another part of the green,
where they begin some game;
great fun to them no doubt.Presently the Band comes marching up from the lower corner of the Parade ground, the men take their places at the stands, which we have seen placed, and prepare to begin.By this time one or two stray men are to be seen lounging about;
two assistants who have got away early from business come slowly along arm in arm; a smart Commissariat Officer, first cousin to a cavalry swell, as far as uniform goes, next makes his appearance—then perhaps by this time one or two ladies have come out, and are walking up and down between the Band and the trees.The Band begins a March, "On to Charlestown," and before that is over although it does not last long, it is wonderful how the number of listeners has increased. Chairs have come down the hill by the Cathedral, up from the lower end and across the ground, all making for the same place, under the trees, where they are placed down so that their occupants may get out and walk about.That must be a new comer with the black hat and feather and black shawl so gracefully put on;
that man, good looking, confident who has just gone up to speak to her is no new comer though, he is well-known, as well he may be.
See he points out the different groups of people to the new arrival, evidently telling her their names and all he can about them; why does she smile when he points to a group standing under a tree at the lower part of the ground? I think I know, but I think I will keep the knowledge to myself.Whose is this well turned out carriage which has come the hill and stopped in the road just opposite to the Band, the wheels are of a regal colour and have, I suppose, a right to be so, and truly the occupant of that carriage is worthy of so well appointed a conveyance. Do you see those two men who have gone up to the carriage window. I mean those two with the broad gold stripes round their cape, I don't know their names, although I promise you that they know themselves who they are.I see a well-conditioned man with a large pair of light coloured whiskers standing at the upper end of the Parade ground, he is evidently waiting for some one for he turns round frequently and looks up the hill. He has not to wait, long, for here come the expected, two ladies and one gentleman; one lady in a chair the other lady, and her escort, riding. The well-conditioned party has not seen them yet, for he is standing with face to the Band, but see, he turns round just as they cross from the road into the green, and well may his face brighten and his eye light up as it rests on the fair equestrian; for fair indeed is she, and graceful and good to see.If I go on noticing each group of people that is worth of notice I fear Mr. Editor will refuse my contribution as being too long.All this time the Band has been going steadily through the programme, and has now got to the last piece.The ground is crowded. The favourite walk, up and down the row of trees, is so full that both from the crowd and coming darkness, it is difficult to distinguish individuals at even a short dis-tance. Is that why that man in the long cloak goes up, only now, to speak to a lady sitting in her chair under one of the trees? They have both been there from almost the first, I saw him bow to her while the Band was still playing the 2nd piece. Why was he waiting until the dusk of evening before going to speak to her? But that is no business of mine, perhaps I did wrong to observe it.Our first friends of this evening the children—have long since been taken home by their nurses, probably they are half undressed en route for bed by this time. Our two aspirants have been joined by others and form now a large group on one side of the Band, each individual thereof smacking as if for a wager.By this time the cricket, which has been going on all the afternoon, is over and the players come up and join the listeners to the music. The dress of these gentlemen, so given to hard exercise, may be convenient and comfortable, but certainly some legs which are thus exposed to criticism would fare better if clothed in every day continuations. Thanks to the darkness however, I cannot recognize faces; I mention this now so that any gentleman, who feels that my remarks apply to him, should not come down on me for making my opinion public.The last piece is over. God save the Queen in being played. Ladies get into their chairs again and propose to go homewards. The cricketers and loungers go towards the club, and I wend my way up the path between the parade ground and the cathedral, when I get to the top of the small hill and turn round and look down.
The Band has disappeared, the listeners to its music have disappeared also, and the ground is deserted. No stay, who is that half way down the road? Someone standing beside it. It is so dark that I cannot possibly tell who they are. Wait, they move on now and as they pass under a lamp
I see that the occupant of the chair is a lady and that her companion has got on a long cloak.RUMOURS OF WARCradles and World
Peace.Rumours of war are disturbing to the ordinary people of all countries who only want to live their everyday lives in peace. Between the Franco-Prussian war of 1870-1 and the Great War there were several war scares. The first was in 1875; and at that time the French were complaining that Germany, with her population of 34 millions, was maintaining a greater army than France whose people numbered 42 millions.
France is still thinking in terms of population, but the conditions are less favourable for her now than in 1875. To-day, Germany counts a people of 60 millions as against France's 40 millions; and while the population of France is stationary, it is to be expected that Germany's figure will in a few years grow to 70 millions.Hitler, too, is thinking of population, but on a lower scale. He is offering a bounty to encourage 200,000 employed women to marry unemployed men and so diminish the national burden of unemployment. The French note to Great Britain on the Disarmament problem strikes the note of fear. She is unable to stand alone against a doubtless hostile country with a 50 per cent. greater population, and welded together into a mili-tarist unity that may ere long burst into the activity of war.
France, therefore, turns to Great Britain as a power equally interested with herself in resisting the German men.

League Not Enough.

The League of Nations, she thinks, is not enough; the Peace Pact of Paris is not enough; and the Pact of Locarno has been heavily discounted by the noisier section of the British press. Something more is required, and what that something is will now have been communicated to the BritishMILITARY
TATTOOTentative Programme ArrangedThe public are to be given a treat towards the end of the present year, when the Military authorities hope to stage a large Military Tattoo, the tentative programme of which, has been drawn up and which promises to be even more spectacular than the one held in 1928.The tentative dates for the event have been fixed for November 1, 2 and 3 and it is proposed to hold the Tattoo at the Military sports grounds at Sookunpoo.Efforts were made to obtain the use of the Race Course at Happy Valley, but the Hong Kong Jockey Club Stewards would not grant the necessary permission.The proceeds of the Tattoo will be devoted to Military charities, and towards the laying-out of additional sports grounds. With the addition of an extra battalion to the Colony the existing grounds have been found inadequate.

The Programme

A meeting of the committee responsible for the arrangements met on Wednesday and the following tentative programme was drawn up:Re-production of the defence of

The Accommodation

The nightly programme will last approximately two and a quarter hours, and it is hoped to be able to accommodate 3,500 spectators at each performance.Amplifiers will be placed at

GOVERNMENT LOAN

Oversubscribed In One Hour

The Hong Kong Government
£25,000,000, loan of which $5,000,000 was opened for public subscription yesterday was well over-subscribed after the first hour.The list closed at 3 p.m. yesterday, by which time the applications from the public totalled $18,605,000.The work of allotment of the loan will be commenced to-day.Government. Meanwhile there is a campaign on the part of a London newspaper with a Paris edition for a definite alliance with France; and this seems to find favour in certain quarters.Whatever happens, it is to the true interest of British to take her stand as a member of the League of Nations. The terms of agreement between the Western Powers on the subject of Disarmament should be thrashed out at the Disarmament Conference and be finally approved by the League of Nations. There is evidence that America and Russia will be prepared to take part in this great work. We want something permanent and yet adaptable, from time to time, to the changing conditions of international relations.
Inside the League we can put all our emphasis on the need for peace and not on preparations for war.
The time for hole and corner conferences outside the League is long past. We must come out into the open. But there are men occupying responsible positions who have not yet shed their imperialist ideas of the nineteenth century. Such men cannot be trusted.

HEAVY FINE FOR OPIUM OFFENCEThe case against two alleged smugglers, Li Lo, and Ho Kam Fuk on two charges of being in possession of 50 taels of prepared opium and 3,120 taels of raw opium on board a sampan and a motor boat, Sing Chau, in the harbour, was concluded at Central Magistracy yesterday. Mr. E. W. Hamilton discharged the first defendant, Li Lo, and fined the second defendant $5,000 with the alternative of 12 months' hard labour on each charge, the sentence to run concurrently.Revenue Officer Grimmit appeared for the prosecution and M. A. da Silva represented Li Lo.
The second defendant was not legally represented.According to Mr. Grimmit, information was received that opium was being brought in, as a result of which Revenue Officer Marks, Revenue Officer Ellis and a party of Chinese officers proceeded in two motor boats. The party under Mr. Marks went to the west end of the fairway, and stationed themselves behind a buoy, while the party under Mr. Ellis went to the east end.At 11.15 a.m. a launch, towing a sampan, was seen coming in. In the southern fairway, a motor boat took the sampan in tow.
Something was seen being passed from the sampan to the motor boat. The Revenue party then swooped down and signalled to the motor boat to stop, but it was raced in the direction of Jardine's pier. The party under Mr. Ellis also joined in the chase.A shot was fired, but the motor boat did not stop. It went into the chamber at Jardine's Pier, and the men in it leapt ashore, leaving the engines running. Just previously, parcels were seen being thrown overboard.A constable on duty, attracted by the sound of shots, caught the first defendant clambering over the sea wall. A District watchman saw three men running, and gave chase. Second defendant, was knocked down by a car.Later three sacks containing to say.As stated, all three accused were committed for trial.They were found at the bottom of

JUDGMENT FOR MR. CROUCHER

CLAIM AGAINST ESTATE OF MR. WOO HAY TONG SUCCEEDS

Defence Arguments Cogent But Not Conclusive

Judgment was given for Mr. N. V. A. Croucher yesterday in the case in which he claimed from the estate of the late Mr. Woo Hay Tong, the sum of $81,000 in respect of certain share transactions. The Chief Justice, His Honour, Mr. A. D. A. MacGregor, in giving judgment said that Mr. Croucher told a reasonable and honest story and had been consistent in his attitude throughout.

The arguments for the defence, said His Lordship, were undoubtedly cogent, but he was unable to regard them as conclusive.

Plaintiff A Witness Of Truth

After reviewing the plaintiff's evidence in detail, His Lordship went on to say:—

What is the defendant's answer to this claim? The Plaintiff, they say is an honest and reputable broker who has given his evidence truthfully and fairly, who had throughout afforded the defence every assistance in the investigation of his claim, but he has from the time of his first interview with Woo Hay Tong on June 1, 1932, misconceived the true position and Woo Hay Tong's real intentions regarding these shares. He honestly believes that Woo Hay Tong undertook to purchase these shares, but in that belief he is honestly mistaken. In support of that attitude the defence relied largely on three contentions. Firstly why should Woo Hay Tong hold no Watson shares other than a block of 100 which he held on mortgage, undertake to purchase these shares instead of merely taking them from Mok as further security for the money which he owed, and as consideration for the release of 1,000 Realities? Woo Hay Tong had only to give the Plaintiff notice that Mok had pledged the shares to him to acquire every right which he could acquire by purchase.

Secondly, that contention is supported by the admitted fact that the Plaintiff's letter of June 1 was found pinned into Woo Hay Tong's advance ledger opposite the statement of Mok's advance account, and not in the book in which Woo Hay Tong's advance ledger opposite the statement of Mok's advance account, and not in the book in which Woo Hay Tong kept a careful record of all the shares which he purchased.

Thirdly, why should Woo Hay Tong, who was a very wealthy man agree to pay interest at 1 per cent per month, a rate considerably in excess of that which he himself normally charged on money advanced, when he was in a position to pay for the shares forthwith?

These arguments are undoubtedly cogent but I am unable to regard them as conclusive. It would, I think, be unsafe to attach to the position in which a letter was found, which may have been merely fortuitous, such weight as to refute the whole of the evidence given by the Plaintiff. Further, counsel for the Plaintiff has suggested many reasons why Woo Hay Tong who did not know the number of the scrip or the actual cost, of it to him should not have entered such a purchase in the appropriate book, and Mr. Sheldon, I am sure, did not advance his list of reasons as necessarily comprehensive.

An Honest Story

The Plaintiff has told a reasonable and an honest story, he has been consistent in his attitude throughout, he at once reduced the transaction into writing on June 1, and I am impressed by the fact that he took that letter to Woo Hay Tong himself and further explained the transaction to him. The Defendant's case is based entirely on probabilities and hypotheses, and while I pay regard to the fact that on the authority of "In re Garnett," 31 Ch. D. 1, and "In re Hodgson," 31 Ch. D. 177, the Plaintiff's evidence must be examined and sifted with great care and almost with suspicion, I am satisfied that he is a witness of truth and that his claim is one which ought to be allowed.

There will therefore be judgment for the plaintiff for the amount claimed and costs.

Mr. H. G. Sheldon appeared for Mr. Croucher, while Mr. Eldon Potter, K.C., Mr. F. C. Jenkin, K.C., and Mr. H. C. Macnamara, instructed by Messrs. Woo and Nash, were for the defendants.

ABSENT FOR TEN YEARS

Leave To Presume Death Allowed

An application was made before the Chief Justice Mr. A. D. A. MacGregor yesterday, by Mr. H. G. Sheldon, instructed by Mr. P. M. Hodgson, on behalf of the Trustee of the estate of Chau Tin Chan, deceased, for a declaration that the death of Chau Tin Chan, a beneficiary under the will, may be presumed and that the estate be administered accordingly or such other order as the Court shall think fit.

It was stated that Chau Tin Chan was last heard of ten years ago when he went abroad.

The Chief Justice made an order directing that the Trustee (petitioner) be at liberty to presume death of Chau Tin Chan and that the estate of the said Chau Tin Chan be administered accordingly. In making the order His Lordship inquired if sufficient advertisement had been made with a view to locating Chau Tin Chan and was assured by Counsel that no one in the family knew his whereabouts.

The order was made with a provision that it should lie in the Registry for three months.

MELBOURNE CENTENARY

Stories of the early days are coming to light in the search for history being conducted in Victoria in connection with the Centenary Celebrations. Here are two incidents related by Mrs. Margaret Fenty, J.P., in a recent broadcast talk.

A pioneer family of Portland, Victoria, named Kittson, arrived in 1842 from Ireland, with five children. Mrs. Lightbody was the oldest of this family, and upon her fell many of the trials and hardships of pioneer life. She took her part in shepherding the sheep, protecting them, from the blacks and dingoes. On one occasion, when all the men were away, she saw the blacks approaching. She dressed in men's clothing, and walking about outside the house, frightened them away. This grand old lady lived to the age of one hundred and one.

Mrs. John Robson tells an interesting experience her aunt had in the early days of Portland. A number of blacks filed into her kitchen early one morning, while she was bathing her three-week-old baby. They were very interested in the bathing process and delighted in the child, whose feet and hands they examined very closely until their chief, King Billy, waved them out of the hut, much to the relief of the mother.

another sailing vessel fast bearing down upon them from astern, and as their vessel was heavily laden, the other sailing vessel soon overtook them.

As the pirate vessel, for such as it was, came alongside them, witness heard one of the pirates shout, "stop your boat." There were seven people in the pirate vessel and three of these, armed with a rifle, a revolver and two knives respectively, board his vessel and drove him and his companions to the bow end of the ship.

Tu Kam's vessel was then manned by some of the pirates and together with the pirates vessel sailed to Kongmun where Tu Kam and his companions were held captive below decks on the boat. "We were given one meal that night by the defendant who was armed with a rifle. We were kept in custody all the night and on the following day we were again given our meals by the accused who was still armed."

The Rescue Party
Towards the evening, we heard shouts and rifle shots and soon afterwards the Police arrived and said, "you need not be afraid for we have come to rescue you. I and my companions were then taken back to Hong Kong by the Police. I have not seen my boat or the cargo since that day."

Witness admitted that he took Inspector Stewart to the Ninetins in a Police Launch and also showed him the spot where they were eventually taken to and where the Police rescued them.

Asked if he had anything to say, defendant denied that he was carrying a rifle at any one time but admitted having fed the captives. Questioned by Mr. Wynne-Jones, witness said the defendant was not one of the three armed men who boarded his ship.

In Chang, another of the partners gave corroborative evidence after which the hearing was adjourned.

BONHAM STRAND APPEAL

Judgment Of Mr. Wood Upheld

APPEAL DISMISSED

The appeal by Li Tse Shi, administratrix of the estate of Li Woon Nam, deceased, against Pong Tsoi Ching, was dismissed with costs by the Full Court, consisting of the Chief Justice, His Honour, Mr. A. D. A. MacGregor, and The Puisne Judge, Mr. Justice Jacks.

The appellants Li Tse Shi, sued as administratrix of the estate of Li Woon Nam who died in 1925, having among other property premises situate at 73 Bonham Strand West. On the 24th March, 1930, an indenture of assignment was registered in the Land Office whereby Li Woon Nam purported to assign these premises to Li Kai Loy who was the adopted son of the deceased Li Woon Nam and his widow, the plaintiff.

On April 20, 1931, the premises were mortgaged by Li Kai Loy to Yan Pun and on July 23, the mortgagee Yan Pun, in exercise of his power of sale sold the premises to the defendant, respondent, Pong Tsoi Ching.

In these circumstances the Plaintiff claimed a declaration that no interest in the premises passed to Li Kai Loy by virtue of the assignment of March 24, 1930, that the mortgage to Yan Pun and a second mortgage dated 1st May, were null and void and of no legal effect, and that the purchase of the defendant respondent from the first mortgagee was also null and void.

By his defence, the respondent claimed that the appellant was estopped from denying his title to the premises in that she consented to the 'impersonation' of Li Woon Nam in connection with the assignment of March 24, 1930.

Decision Upheld

The case came before Mr. Justice Wood, sitting without a jury on May 29, 1933, and after a five days hearing the learned trial judge on June 8, 1933, delivered a judgment on fact in which he found that the Plaintiff's contemporaneous knowledge of the assignment had been established to his satisfaction.

The Chief Justice in dismissing the appeal, said that he was satisfied that Mr. Justice Wood came to a proper and justifiable conclusion on the evidence before him. Having regard to the fact that the Court had had the advantage of the evidence of Mr. Hugh Jones, Mr. Justice MacGregor said that any other conclusion by Mr. Justice Wood, would have meant straining the evidence unduly in favour of the plaintiff.

The judgment of the Court below was affirmed and the appeal was dismissed with costs.

Mr. Justice Jacks read the judgment of Mr. Justice Lindsell, who heard the appeal, with the Chief Justice. Mr. Justice Lindsell also upheld the judgment of Mr. Justice Wood.

ANOTHER PRATAS VICTIM

Col di Lana Aground

Another vessel fell foul of the Pratras shoals within a month when the Italian steamer Col di Lana went aground late on Wednesday night and immediately sent out S.O.S. which was answered by the s.s. Kamo Maru, an N.Y.K. vessel which was due in Hong Kong yesterday morning from Australia, but which swerved off its course and went to the rescue of the grounded vessel.

As far as is known the Col di Lana is carrying no passengers, her cargo consisting of beans which is being shipped from Tsingtao to Singapore.

The last message received from Captain G. Gerolmich states that the vessel is still stranded but is in no immediate danger. He hopes to get the vessel off without outside assistance but the Hong Kong and Whampoa Co.'s tug, "Henry Keswick" is ready to go to her help at a moment's notice.

The s.s. Col di Lana is a vessel of 6,000 tons and was built in 1928 at Trieste. She is a steel screw vessel and equipped with wireless.

This is the second accident to occur to this ship recently. On her way out from Europe last month she grounded in Haiphong Harbour but she was undamaged and was able to proceed on her way to Hong Kong.

SHAREBROKER'S CLAIM

Macao Man Sued for $703

A claim for $703 by Mr. A. A. R. Botelho, a local sharebroker from Choy Anok, c/o Banco Nacional Ultramarino, Macao, for breach of contract in respect of the purchase of 500 Hotel shares was heard before Mr. Justice Jacks yesterday.

Mr. G. S. Ford of Messrs. Wilkinson & Grist appeared for the plaintiff and Mr. F. X. D'Almada, senior, for the defendant.

In the course of his evidence, the plaintiff stated that on January 14, Hotel shares were standing at about $9.10 buyers and $9.20 sellers, having dropped approximately ten per cent. The Sharebrokers' Association created a flat rate for these shares to assist him. The Association sold out all the shares which had no margin. He sent the defendant an account of the sale, and made requests for payment. Defendant referred him to a Mr. Fernandez, who subsequently sent plaintiff a letter.

Mr. D'Almada submitted that as the plaintiff did not prove that he had lost anything that there was no case for his claim to answer. Mr. Ford replied that his client had to sell the shares at $9.

Mr. D'Almada: The Association was the assignee.

Mr. Ford: No. The Association assisted the plaintiff.

His Lordship inquired who had paid for the shares that plaintiff had purchased.

No Application

Plaintiff replied that the shares were bought for delivery on settlement day. At 3 p.m., the closing time of the banks, the settlement day also closed. The shares were sold on that day by witness on the instructions of the Association.

His Lordship: Why did you not think the defendant would not take delivery on January 23?

Mr. D'Almada pointed out that his client had received no application for margin.

Plaintiff: If the defendant wanted to take delivery of the shares he could have had them up till 3 p.m.

In reply to another question witness stated that the defendant did not pay. The Association sold for his (the plaintiff's) account.

Mr. D'Almada: Because he defaulted.

The hearing was adjourned until July 24, and the Court ordered that all papers connected with the case from A to Z must be produced as cases of this nature were complicated.

EXCHANGE DEAL SEQUEL

Bank in Ex-parte Proceedings

Mr. Eldon Potter, K. C., instructed by Mr. H. C. Lee appeared for the Overseas-Chinese Banking Corporation Limited, of No. 13 Queen's Road Central, in a case in which they sued Messrs. Wing Yue firm and Chu Wai-yue, managing partner, for damages for breach of three contracts.

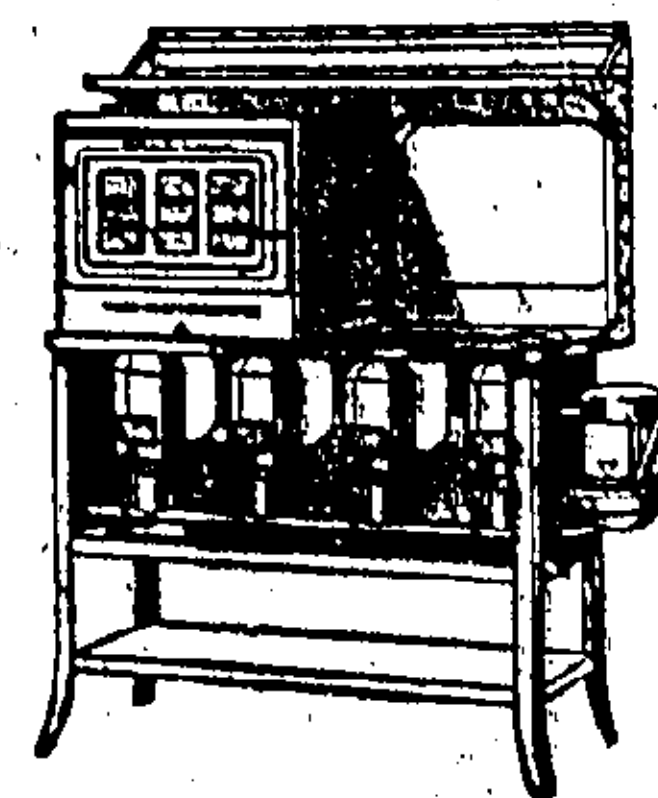

The case was heard ex-parte before His Honour Mr. Justice MacGregor. The contracts were in respect of $320,000, $25,000 and $25,000 respectively, the dates being January 23, January 27 and February 5.

Dealing with the statement of claim, Mr. Potter said that the contracts were exchange contracts, and said that it was the custom of banks where a customer had outstanding contracts at the end of each month, to send such customer a list. In the damages in the present case, the plaintiffs were also claiming 1/5th per cent. of the amount for stamp duty as this was the practice of banks in cases where the customer defaults. It would be highly dangerous for banks not to adopt this practice as it would mean a loss to the Treasury.

The revenue duty on the $320,000 contract had been paid, and it was the opinion of the plaintiff that the liability would fall on them to pay the revenue of both the 25,000 contracts.

Chan Kah-hai, manager of the plaintiff bank, gave evidence after which His Lordship gave judgment for the plaintiff with costs.

PIRACY RECALLED

Chinese Faces Serious Charge

Cheung Shing, aged about 30, appeared before Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday charged with armed robbery of a sailing junk No. 2783-U and 50 bags of wolfram ore, and with possession of arms, to wit, a rifle and 9 rounds of ammunition, at Kongmun Channel on April 14.

Mr. W. J. Lockhart Smith, Assistant Crown Solicitor appeared for the Crown, while accused was unrepresented.

In outlining the facts of the case briefly, Mr. Lockhart Smith said that three Chinese boatmen were the owners of a sailing boat No. 2783-U and were carrying on a trade between San Mei and Hong Kong.

On April 11 they were chartered by a merchant of San Mei to carry a cargo of 50 bags of wolfram ore from San Mei to Hong Kong.

On the morning of April 12, the vessel set sail for Hong Kong from San Mei carrying the cargo specified and when just off the Ninetins Islands, they saw another sailing vessel to their stern and fast overhauling them. Eventually they were overtaken and ordered to stop while three armed men came aboard and removed the three owners to their own vessel. Both vessels were then sailed into Kongmun Pass.

Surprise Attack

The next day following on information received the Police made a surprise attack on the pirates by an overland route and during the attack the pirates opened fire and wounding one of the men, the defendant, in the thigh. A rifle was later found which was identified as one which was seen in the hands of the accused.

Mr. James Rodger Godfrey Wyatt, in the witness box said he was a Boarding Officer attached to the Harbour Department. He held a Master Mariner's Certificate and identified Chart No. 1180 showing the Islands positioned within the waters of the Colony, based on an Admiralty Survey. Witness identified the Ninetins Islands and High Island on the Chart and the Pass to the north of the latter island which was called Kongmun Pass.

All these islands are within the waters of the Colony, the boundary of which is shown by a red line which was put there by the Harbour office and which I can verify," said witness.

Tu Kam, one of the three owners of the "pirated vessel" said he was a native of San Mei and was a part owner of the vessel in question.

"Stop Your Boat!"

On April 11, 1934, he and his partners were given instructions by a merchant of San Mei to deliver a cargo of 50 bags of wolfram ore packed in gunny bags and flour sacks to Hong Kong.

The cargo was consigned to the Sum Cheong Company and the Rung Fung Company, the former to take 8 bags and the latter 42 bags.

At about 9 a.m. on April 13 while just off the Ninetins Island, witness, and his companions espied

PARENTS AND BAD MOVIES

Where lies the responsibility when children see undesirable motion pictures? The responsibility of the ordinary citizen is not to be denied, and that of the producers is too obvious to need further discussion—but what about that measure of it which belongs to all parents? Some parents are only too aware of their responsibility in this respect, but feel quite unable to cope with the problem. The argument presents itself in this light: "All the neighbour boys and girls go to the pictures continually, so how can I possibly keep Tommy at home?" This may seem difficult, but where the programme is undesirable it is an inescapable duty. The neighbour boys and girls are not this mother's direct responsibility, Tommy is. And why should he not be taken into her confidence and made to realize that she thinks too highly of her son—or daughter—to feel that he or she could really enjoy a vulgar or unwholesome picture?

As a class, too, parents should act in the matter, and get together to devise means for procuring suitable pictures, and suitable pictures only, for their children. In combination with teachers of the city or neighbourhood, they can exert a strong influence on local managements, in behalf of better films, and urge them to provide special weekly programmes suitable for children. In fairness to the local theatres it must be said that they do look after the interests of the kiddies.

At this moment parents also can co-operate—through parent-teacher associations, civic organizations, women's clubs, and other similar groups—with the Motion Picture Research Council, whose objectives are to decrease the amount of objectionable material in films and to further the production of entertaining and educational films for children.

The council has stated that, of the current motion picture productions in the United States,

HEALTH IN BRITAIN

More Infant Lives
Saved

London, June 20.
Reviewing the services of the Ministry of Health in Commons to-day, the Minister of Health, Sir Hilton Young, said that between 1919 and 1934 the vote of the Ministry had increased by the enormous figure of £58,000,000 to £70,000,000, but half of that increase was in respect of derating grants in accordance with the Act of 1929 and had nothing to do with social services.

Referring to health matters, he said that the general death rate of the nation showed an encouraging downward tendency and was ten per cent. lower than a few years ago.

Another encouraging proof of the value of health services was found in the reduction of the infant death rate which during the last ten years had represented an annual saving of 40,000 more infants under one year old than at the beginning of the century.

Health Improved

Improvement in health of adults continued and was most remarkable in the case of typhoid fever, of which in 1932 only one died for every 22 at the beginning of century.

In the last ten years the death rate from tuberculosis had decreased by 22 per cent.

The Water Question

Turning to the question of water supplies, he said that the difficulties were not to prevent a dry summer but to check of water waste. Supplies were fairly good. Emergency measures had been in active progress wherever needed, but voluntary co-operation of the public in economising water was largely responsible for the satisfactory position regarding urban supplies.

There great difficulties in specified rural areas and unless there was quite unforeseeable rainfall within the next few weeks those difficulties would increase.—British Wireless.

TERRORISM IN AUSTRIA CONTINUES

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright.))

Vienna, June 20.

Although official announcements declare that the number and extent of the acts of terrorism is declining, the list of daily reports of new attempts to blow up buildings, bridges and railway lines is still very heavy. No less than eighteen attempts, more or less successful, to destroy telephone cables, officials' houses and railway places occurred in Vorarlberg.

In St. Martin, an earth wire was thrown over a high tension cable so that the incoming current was cut off from the town for the whole night. In Schwechat, the public telephone office was blown skyhigh by bombs. Similar occurrences were reported from numerous other parts of the country.—Transocean Kuo Min.

TAI-KAM LEPER COLONY

Dr. Lake To Escort Party

(From Our Special Correspondent)

Canton, June 21.

The Tai-Kam Island Hospital for the treatment of leprosy has drawn so wide attention that the Rev. John Lake, founder and advisor of this institution, will conduct to-morrow a party of leading residents of Canton, including Mr. Tang Shao Yi, leading member of the South-west Political Council, to visit that island.

The inspection party will be joined at Hong Kong by well-known persons in commercial circles and social service including the Hon. Dr. S. W. Tso, Chinese member of the Legislative Council and several British army officers. The contingent, escorted by the Rev. and Mrs. John Lake, will leave Hong Kong Friday afternoon aboard a chartered steamer for Tai-kam, about 100 miles South-west of Canton.

Leprosy is a dreadful disease prevalent mostly in South China. Until the establishment of the hospital at Tai-kam by the untiring efforts of the Rev. John Lake, very little was done for the lepers in this part of the country.

"This disease can be cured," Dr. John Lake said. "Injections of chaulmoogra oil of various preparations, if given under proper conditions and over a sufficiently long period, effects cure. Treatment must be begun in time."

"The number of lepers in South China is estimated by medical and government authorities to be between 100,000 and 300,000. Probably not more than a thousand are receiving adequate care. Tai-kam Island, by virtue of location and unique features is destined to become the greatest leprosy centre in China."

Work among the lepers was begun in 1904. Tai-kam Island was bought by the distinguished statesman, Dr. Wu Ting-fang, in 1920 and conveyed in fee simple to the Chinese Baptists for a leper colony. The first village unit was virtually completed in 1928, when the lepers were moved to their new home.

Donors of funds to the Hospital include General Chiang Kai Shek, Chairman of the Military Affairs Commission, Mr. Sun Fo, President of the Legislative Yuan, and many other well known Chinese and foreigners.

CANTON NEWS ITEMS

Officers on Political Business

(From Our Special Correspondent)

Canton, June 21.

General Ho Chen, Chairman of the Hunan Provincial Government, is expected here to-day to discuss important military questions with General Chen Tsai Tong, Commander-in-Chief of the First Group Army. Considerable political significance is attached to General Ho's visit.

It is said that General Pao Hsueh Hsi, Second in Command of the Fourth Group Army, is also said to be coming here to interview leading members on Nanking-Canton relations. In addition to these two officers, there are already another two Nanking generals here at the moment. All this tends to show that important discussion is held behind the scenes.

Canton-Swallow Railway

The Provincial Department of Reconstruction is raising funds for the construction of a railway between Canton and Swallow. Wealthy people in the towns on Eastern Kwangtung, through which railway will pass, are invited to subscribe to the shares of this railway.

At the same time overseas Chinese are also requested to take an interest in this railway, which is strictly a provincial enterprise. The Provincial Department of Reconstruction will allot a substantial sum for the completion of this railway, as it is making good money in several monopolies such as sugar, cement, tungsten, and other forthcoming enterprises.

It was proposed that the trustees of the British Boxer Indemnity Funds be approached for a grant in the construction of the railway, but this plan is out of the question, because the proposed

STRAIGHT FROM THE SHOULDER

(BY "NO QUARTER")

By dint of great personal effort and no little expenses, I have succeeded in obtaining the exclusive rights of "PUT NOT YOUR TRUST IN PRINCES," the reminiscences of the arch-woman-spy, Anna Slipitova.

Madame Slipitova, whose aliases include such famous names as Raca, La Belle Assassine, and Mrs. Liphook, will begin next week her searing exposure of the corrupt and immoral practices which honeycomb the public and private lives of the great. Those in high places have good reason to shiver in their shoes, for Madame Slipitova is not squeamish about unpleasant facts.

Perhaps the most striking feature of the whole work is her lurid description of how she discovered the Turkish prime minister in the bedroom of Rasputin's first wife, blowing his nose on the plans of a new battleship. She shot him through the heart.

You MUST NOT MISS this feature.

SOCIAL DRIBBLES
The most important social event of the week took place on Tuesday, when Lady Featherstonehaugh (pronounced Fanshawe) opened a bazaar in aid of the Indiscreet Ironmongers' Association. She was given a warm reception, and afterwards listened to a jolly concert, the programme of which is given below.

PROGRAMME
1. SONG—"Trees" by The Kowloon Residents Choir.
2. RECITATION—"Don't go down the Main, Daddy" by Signor Opzi (the celebrated Gasso Profundo).
3. SONG—"Why bring that up" by The Yacht Club Boys.
4. SOME IMITATIONS—by "a $500.00 baby."

At the close of the performance, a pretty incident took place when a small, Chinese girl approached Lady Featherstonehaugh (pronounced Fanshawe), offered her a flower, and asked for a Cuthberts-tonghaugh (pronounced Cumsaw) IF BABLE WE MUST Surely Saturday night at the Hong Kong Hotel gets gayer. ### QUESTION OF TIN

Opinion of An Expert

London, June 21.

The Exchange Equalisation Fund has not been driven out of the foreign exchange by dealers and I am therefore at a loss to understand why some dealers are in opposition to the Buffer Tin Pool which will not take away business from dealers but merely try to prevent violent fluctuations in the metal which is very harmful to producers and consumers alike, at the same time rendering speculative manipulation of the market very difficult," stated a well-known expert in an interview with Reuter, adding that fluctuations in tin have been more violent than any other commodity.

On the other hand Mr. William Stevens, speaking at a meeting of Bangor Dredging, said that if consumption continued to increase, there was every reason to hope that restriction would come in the end and companies will be able to work up to full capacity.

He pointed out that reduction in world stocks which by many is now considered to be low enough coupled with considerable increases of the quota already granted, is a direct reflection of improvement in the tin position.

Mr. Stevens was of the opinion that further increases in the quota may not be far distant.—Reuter.

Railway Agreement Revision

Following the arrival of three representatives from the Ministry of Railways to take part in the coming negotiations in revising the Canton-Kowloon Railway, formal negotiations will start as soon as Mr. Hu Kai Yin, committee member of the Kwangtung Provincial Government, returns to this city from Hainan Island.

The negotiations will be held in Canton. Three delegations will represent the British section, including Mr. R. D. Walker, manager of the Kowloon section.

PRINCE KAYA OF JAPAN

On Continental
Visit

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright.))

Munich, June 20.

Prince Kaya of Japan and his wife arrived here on Wednesday intending to stay for two days after which they will go to Vienna, Prague and Berlin. Fourteen days will be spent in the German capital. The Royal couple also intend to visit East Prussia and the Free City of Danzig.

Their first act in Munich was to lay an immense laurel wreath tied with white red ribbons, the Japanese national colours, accompanied by a dedication on the memorial to the German soldiers killed in the world war.

Prince and Princess Kaya also visited the old Pinakothek art gallery, the great German agricultural college Schonhof where they were welcomed by Dr. Soli, son of a former German Ambassador to Tokyo, the German museum, the famous Hofbrau brewery and finally the beautiful Starnberger Lake where King Ludwig II met his mysterious and tragic end.—Transocean Kuo Min.

DOLLFUSS INVITED TO PARIS

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright.))

Paris, June 20.

Barthou seized the opportunity on Tuesday night's conversation in a train in Vienna railway station to invite Dollfuss to visit Paris at an early date, reports "Intransigeant" whose special correspondent is accompanying Barthou.

According to "Agence Economique et Financiere," Barthou declined Dollfuss's suggestion to make a lengthy stay in the Austrian Chancellery on his return trip from Belgrade, giving as his reason that the urgency of business in Paris requires his return there as early as possible.

It is not yet known whether Dollfuss will accept the invitation to go to Paris.—Transocean Kuo Min.

PIRATE FIRE RETURNED BY EAGLE PLANE

ALL BRITISH CAPTIVES SAFE

Effective Work By British Navy And Air Force

An important item of news furnished by Reuter last night in the "Shuntien" piracy, which has now happily ended so far as the safety of the five British captives is concerned, was that an aeroplane carrying out reconnaissance flights was fired on by the pirates. The fire was returned and it was then observed that Mr. Nicholl and Mr. Shen Tien Ling were in a sampan. All the British captives are safe.

It now remains for the Chinese troops to net the desperadoes in the cordon which they are throwing around the pirate lair, and also effect the rescue of the remaining captives.

British officials in London are cautious in tone when questioned about the possibility of replacing the guards on British ships. The matter, however, is likely to be brought up in the House of Commons.

International policing of the seas "in one of the worst administered zones in the world" is urged by the London "Morning Post" falling better control over the examination of Chinese passengers.

Chefoo, June 21.

H.M.S. Wren, which arrived at 5.45 p.m. to-day, informed Reuter that H.M.S. Eagle arrived on the scene of the piracy on Tuesday afternoon and commenced immediate flights.

Continuing the flights on Wednesday the discovery was made of a group of junks ten miles from the west mouth of the Yellow River.

After being fired on and returning the fire, the observer spotted a sampan containing Mr. Nicholl and Mr. Shen Tien Ling, who were removed to the Eagle.

Lieutenants Luce and Field, Mr. Brand and Mr. Watson were released at 6.30 p.m.

It appears that Mr. Nicholl and his companion were en route to the village to negotiate for their release when it was found they had been freed.—Reuter.

MRS. NICHOLL OVERJOYED

Shanghai, June 21.

"Words are quite inadequate to express my admiration and appreciation of our Navy," said Mrs. Nicholl to Reuter on learning of her husband's release.

Mrs. Nicholl added: "I am quite a different person to-day."

She telegraphed her grateful thanks to both the Admiral, Sir Frederic Dreyer and the British Minister, Sir Alexander Cadogan.

Mrs. Nicholl met the s.s. Shuntien on arrival in Shanghai this afternoon in order to take care of her husband's luggage and to get a first-hand account of the piracy.—Reuter.

MR. ROSS IN DANGER

Chefoo, June 21.

The condition of Mr. J. P. Ross, third officer of the s.s. Shuntien, which has been very critical, remains unchanged.

Three openings have been made into the head through the skull and a bad fracture.

The patient was informed of his mother's expected arrival this afternoon and expressed great joy at her approaching visit.—Reuter.

HOPE ABANDONED

Chefoo, Later.

All hope of saving the life of Mr. Ross has been given up.

The doctors have announced that, but for Mr. Ross' youth and vitality, his life would have been despaired of, as the base of the skull has been very badly clubbed.—Reuter.

CAPTIVES CAST OFF

Peking, June 21.

All five British captives are now free, having been picked up from sampans by the British destroyer, H.M.S. Whited, and the aircraft-carrier H.M.S. Eagle. One of the 20 Chinese captives has also been released.

Apparently the bandit morale has been broken by the manner in which the Chinese troops have closed in on them and by the relentless pursuit of the party by aeroplanes from the British aircraft-carrier H.M.S. Eagle.

The careful combing of the coast and hinterland by the planes disclosed a suspicious looking party yesterday, in which Europeans were observed. The planes followed the party throughout the day, till dusk.

Between 5 p.m. and 6 p.m. the captives were pushed off in sampans by the pirates, and were subsequently picked up, one by a plane and the others by the destroyer. It is reported that the pirates sent messages by Mr. G. D.

Lord Derby's Hyperion, winner of last year's Derby, had to be content with third place, one and half lengths behind Thor II. Hyperion's betting odds were 8 to 11.

In the special place betting, Felicitat was evenly backed, while on the others it was proportionate.—Reuter.

SOVIET ARMY AND NAVY

Greater Mobility Sought

Moscow, June 20.

One-man control of the Red Army and Navy is provided in an order issued by the Central Executive Committee, whereby M. Voroshilov, Commissar of Military and Naval Affairs, who suppressed the Kronstadt revolt in 1921, is appointed Commissar of War and head of the "Commissariat for the Defence of the Soviets."

The Revolutionary Military Council and the Collegium of the Commissariat of War and Navy have been dissolved.

"The order is intended to secure central control of, and greater mobility in, the Army and Navy.—Reuter.

Shen Tien-ling, Minister of Interior in the Peking Government.

Marshal Wu Pei-fu, with Nan-king Chinese naval and land forces is busily engaged in rounding up the pirates, who are additionally being closed in by General Han Fu-chu's troops.

The Chinese gunboats, Tung Tin and Ting Hai are searching the coast for signs of the pirates and the captives. The gunboat Hai Chiu is lying off Chang Shan, Tao, keeping watch for any movement of the pirates who may try to go to sea again.

The Chinese Commander-in-Chief of the Third Naval Squadron at Wei-Hai-Wei is under orders from Nanking to take all possible measures to rescue the captives and round up the pirates.—Reuter.

BRITISH WIRELESS REPORT

London, June 20.

British seaplanes reconnoitring from the aircraft carrier, H.M.S. Eagle, are reported to have picked up Mr. G. D. Nicholl, one of the Englishmen who were kidnapped by pirates from the steamer "Shuntien" near the mouth of the Yellow River, in China, on Monday.

Mr. Nicholl was found in a sampan, accompanied by a Chinese, probably one of the 20 natives who were made prisoners at the time.

The pirates, all of whom were armed, are believed to have numbered 30 or more. They embarked as passengers and overpowered the Captain on the main deck, and then went to the cabins where the officers were asleep and made them prisoners. The women on board the Shuntien were not molested.

The British destroyer, Veteran, is patrolling the coast near where the captives are believed to have been landed.—British Wireless.

ADMIRALTY MESSAGE

London, June 20.

The Admiralty announces that according to information received from His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, China Station, Admiral Sir Frederic Dreyer, four of the kidnapped passengers of the s.s. Shuntien, Lieutenants Luce and Field and Messrs. Brand and Watson are now safe as the result of naval action against the pirates.

The four men are said to be in good health and are now aboard H.M.S. Whited.

No information has so far been received here regarding the other prisoners.—Reuter.

GERMAN LINER SINKS

After Striking A Submerged Rock

Stavenger, June 21.

The German liner "Dresden" sank this morning.—Reuter.

Oslo, June 20.

One thousand passengers aboard the German liner, "Dresden," enjoying a pleasure cruise on a flood on the west coast of Norway, near Haugesund, this evening, were terrified to hear the ship grinding on a submerged rock, practically ripping off the bottom of the liner and flooding the stokehole, causing a heavy list.

An S.O.S. message brought the British battleship, H.M.S. Rodney, racing to the assistance but before her arrival, the Captain grounded the liner in the bay of an island.

One hundred of the panic-stricken passengers, jumped and swam ashore, but all the others were landed by boat. Four are missing and are believed to have been drowned. One boat containing 20 women capsized.

The Captain and crew have abandoned the ship, which, with three holds full of water, is lying in shallow water.

All the passengers were German workmen from the Sear district. The cruise was organised by the German Workers' Front.—Reuter.

WAR BETWEEN JAPAN AND RUSSIA

Statement By General Hishikari

Dairen, June 21.

General Hishikari has assured Reuter that there will be no war between Russia and Japan.

He said: "Despite warlike preparations in Siberia there is at present absolutely no cause for war. Japan's policy, according to Mr. Hirota, is based on super-negotiation and conciliation."

General Hishikari declared that the purpose of the Soviet demonstrations was possibly for discrediting Japan and aggrandizing a menace against whom a formidable army is necessary.—Reuter.

ANGLO-DUTCH SECRET AGREEMENT

Japanese Reports Denied

London, June 20.

There is no foundation for the reports published in a Japanese newspaper that Great Britain and the Netherlands have concluded a secret agreement for an united front on military and economic matters in the Far East, and that the Commander-in-Chief of the British troops in Malaya will shortly visit the Netherlands, according to authoritative information received by Reuter.—Reuter.

RECOVERY IN AMERICA

Large Financial Allotment

Washington, June 20.

President Roosevelt has signed the Deficiency Bill allotting over $2,000,000,000 for Government finance for the year beginning July 1, and appropriations for general relief, public works and drought relief.

The President also signed the Rayburn Bill providing for the establishment of a Federal Commission to regulate the communications industry.

The Communications Commission will be established on July 1. President Roosevelt later signed the Loans to Industry Bill to enable the provision of capital to industry through three channels.

A sum of $276,000,000 is available for five-year loans through financial institutions or in extraordinary circumstances, directly by the Government to industry.

A further $300,000,000 is provided for five-year loans to be made by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation directly to industry with a limit of $500,000 to any single borrower.—Reuter.

PURCHASE OF COTTON

CONDEMNATION OF N. R. A.

Code Authority in Revolt

Washington, June 21.

The London "Morning Post," in its first to revolt against the Codes and charges General Johnson and the National Recovery Administration with bad faith in suspending the fair trade provisions of the Code.

Mr. Harkness, Chairman of the Code Authority, declares that the recovery programme has made conditions worse and, with abandonment of price control, racketeering is again springing up.

The action affects 11,000 factories and 350,000 workers.—Reuter.

CLEARING HOUSE FOR GERMAN TRADE

France Likely To Follow Britain

London, June 20.

The reply of His Majesty's Government to the German Government's note announcing the decision of the Reichsbank to suspend cash transfers on German and long-term debts abroad was handed to the German Ambassador in London this afternoon.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Neville Chamberlain, announced last Friday that the British Government intended to take action in reply to the Reichsbank decision unless any negotiations undertaken should, before July 1, result in a satisfactory agreement, and a Bill was introduced in the House of Commons this afternoon.

The Bill authorises the setting up of clearing offices for collecting and dealing with certain debts and also the imposition of restriction on imports from certain foreign countries.

It was presented by the Chancellor of the Exchequer and read for the first time.—British Wireless.

FRENCH EFFORTS TO REACH AGREEMENT

Paris, June 21.

French economic experts are going to Berlin in order to secure an agreement for the transfer of the Dawes and Young Loan payments.

If the talks are not ended by July 15, it is expected that France will establish a clearing house for Franco-German trade.—Reuter.

UNIVERSAL DROUGHT

Relieved in Many Places

London, June 20.

The world's drought problem is still unsolved although it has been relieved by rain in many places at home and abroad.

The seriousness of the situation in London is indicated by a Metropolitan Water Board notice threatening compulsory restrictions in a week, falling further considerable voluntary reduction in use by consumers in the interval.

The drought has been broken in Paris, ironically enough on the first day of the "Grande Semaine" open air festivities.

Moderate rains have fallen in Bavaria and other parts of Germany while slight rains occurred in Czechoslovakia.

In Yugoslavia and Austria, however, the weather remains hot and rainless, though in the rest of Eastern Europe useful showers are reported.

A CLEARING SYSTEM AGREEMENT

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright).)

London, June 20.

The British Government has postponed sending off the reply note to Germany on the transfer question because the disinclination of the city towards the establishment of a clearing system has become much stronger. For instance, it is pointed out that the passivity of the English trade balance with Germany in the first quarter of 1934 was only 0.2 million pounds sterling as against 0.6 in the first quarter of 1933, and 1.5 millions in 1932. But the indispensable condition for a satisfactory working clearing system is a heavy balance because it is out of excess sums due to Germany by British exporters that British creditors—trade remaining as now—would receive their interest payments.

Moreover, when the trade balances of the British Dominions and Crown Colonies are included, the possibility of a clearing system disappears. For instance the first quarter of 1934 in the latter countries alone had an export surplus to Germany of 5.775 million pounds so that the British Empire taken as a whole for the first quarter of 1934 had an export surplus to Germany, in other words, a clearing deficit of 5.575 million pounds sterling.—Transocean-Kue Min.

ENGLAND DEFEAT THE REST BY TEN WICKETS

Robbed Of Innings Victory By Valentine's Not-Out Century

(Special Air-Mail Service)

London, June 6. The test trial match which ended at Lord's yesterday in a win for England by ten wickets—despite a resolute not-out innings of 102 by B. H. Valentine for The Rest—showed us that we have any number of batsmen up to test match form. It also revealed that we have a great slow left-hander in Verity, and a capital leg-break bowler, who is also an exceptionally good field, in Mitchell, of Derbyshire.

Our three best fast bowlers, Larwood, G. O. Allen, and Clark, are out of action for the time being. But Farnes is a good fast bowler, and really fast, who will be better every time he bowls.

What we lack, at present, is a medium-paced right-handed bowler of the type of J. T. H. Hearne and Tate, one who can be relied on not only to get wickets, but to keep runs down. At the moment Geary seems to be the best and, most reliable of this style.

Ames' Double Value
England has a fine wicket-keeper and an even finer batsman in Ames. Here we are distinctly fortunate. A wicket-keeper who can bat like Ames is a tremendous asset to a side.

It is to be hoped that R. E. S. Wyatt, C. F. Walters and Hammond will all have completely recovered from their bruises and sprains by Friday, so that the Selection Committee may have a free and unembarrassed choice from the fourteen men they have asked to be at Trent Bridge.

England's overnight total of 414 was taken to 472, when the innings was declared closed. The Nawab was missed at second slip off Farnes; it was his second chance in the same place—the first had been off Bowes quite early in his innings. Farnes analysis gives no idea of how well he bowled.

Both he and Bowes, fast bowlers, could urge that there was a period after luncheon on Monday when the batsmen put at and missed several balls. But, judged as a whole, the Nawab and Ames batted very finely against good and what may be called rather uncomfortable bowling.

Valentine To The Rescue
Going in 254 runs behind, The Rest lost Walters at 35, and Mitchell, bowled by a beautiful ball at 43. Barnes scored fast, and when he left he had made 48 out of 65. Turnbull's 28 was a nicely-played innings, but he was caught at extra cover. Paynter was caught at short leg, and Langridge caught and bowled. Robbins made 19 of the 87 added for the seventh wicket, and then fell to Verity's fast ball.

Meanwhile, Valentine had been getting runs. He found a useful partner in Duckworth, who hit Mitchell hard on the on-side and Farnes. But in the end England were left only 18 to win.

An innings defeat had seemed inevitable at one time, but B. H. Valentine batted splendidly. Thanks largely to him, the last 4 wickets put on 148. Valentine, going in fourth wicket down at 82, scored 108 out of 189, and was undefeated at the end.

His innings was as good as any in the match. He timed the ball beautifully, and made many lovely off-drives.

He was also very good pulling any ball the least short, and at one period Mitchell, who was perhaps kept on too long, was heavily punished. Valentine has lovely wrists and is quick on his feet.

Rather off colour since his return from India he yesterday ran into his best form. Barnes also played a very good innings—very free and attractive, with a number of hard, clean strokes. It was off a very good leg break which kicked up quickly that he was caught, at the second attempt, by Hammond in the slips.

Verity and Mitchell again bowled well, though the latter sent down more loose balls than in the first innings. Hammond bowled a few overs, and clear bowled Walters with a fine ball, but Nichols has not, at present, worked up to his full spare.

AUSTRALIAN CAPTAIN 172 NOT OUT

After repeated batting failures, W. M. Woodfull, the Australian captain, scored 172 not out against Lancashire at Old Trafford. With a definite decision impossible the Australians batted all day, and at the close had raised their overnight score of 26 for the loss of McCabe to 338, only two more wickets going down.

With Brown also reaching three figures, he and Woodfull set up a new record for an Australian second wicket in England by scoring 281 together, which surpasses the stand of 278 between Bardsley and Macartney in 1921.

Until he completed his hundred Woodfull was very slow, but later he drove powerfully to secure nine of his twelve 4's. Altogether Woodfull batted five hours; he completed his first 50 out of 105 in two hours ten minutes, and then went on to make his hundred out of 204 in three and a half hours.

Brown was even less enterprising than his captain. He scored mainly with neat glances and strokes to leg, his best strokes being eight 4's.

The painstaking methods of the batsmen irritated the small crowd and caused considerable barracking. When stumps were pulled out the tourists were 420 ahead with seven wickets in hand.

SUSSEX'S NINE BOWLERS

Defying a keen Sussex attack for six hours, three Warwickshire batsmen—Croom, Bates and Kilner—not only saved their county from an innings defeat, but brought the side to safety at Birmingham.

Leading by 255 on the first innings, Sussex looked well placed, but Warwickshire scored 313 for the loss of two wickets.

After Croom had helped in a useful opening stand, Kilner and Bates put on 209 for the second wicket in four hours Sussex trying to break up the partnership. Tate worked desperately hard, sending down 30 overs for only 43 runs.

In scoring 153 not out, Kilner made his first century of the season. He played faultless defensive cricket for six hours, obtaining his runs out of 313 and hitting a six-off Wensley and sixteen 4's. Bates concentrated on defence, taking nearly three hours to reach his 50.

ahead and took soundings. It was reported that she was making no water, but I had the lifeboats manned and the men at their stations.

"We tried to get her off, but the engines could not move her, so I stopped the engines. We finally got off at 5.20 a.m. on June 11 by lightening the ship and with the assistance of a tug boat."

Past Experience

He had been a Master on this particular route for 23 years and it had been his experience when approaching the Basian Straits that the current invariably set towards the east. He had reckoned on being taken three or four miles east when he set the course.

Witness produced the log books of the last three voyages to show that he had made similar provision before.

The Court adjourned to consider the chart calculations supplied by witness and after an hour returned to state that they disagreed with his position as given on the night of June 5. It then transpired that the Court had misunderstood a time given by witness and after a further adjournment they announced that the positions were correct.

In answer to Lt. Commander Branson, witness said he estimated high water time where the ship grounded at between 1 and 2 a.m. He did not know of the chart instructions that the general trend of the drift in this vicinity was given as from west to north-west, but submitted that as he was 20 miles outside the Basian Straits he would not be affected.

After Mr. Balgent the Second Officer had given evidence, the Court retired for ninety minutes to consider its finding.

GROUNDING OF S.S. CHANGTE

Master's Error of Judgment

FINDING OF MARINE COURT OF INQUIRY

"We find that the grounding was due to an error of judgment on the part of Mr. F. C. Gambrell in that he carried on his course too long after failing to sight Sibego Island Light when he expected to sight it. We further find that all the precautions taken by Mr. Gambrell were sound and seamanlike up till 1 a.m. but that he committed an error of judgment after 1 a.m. in not taking into consideration the possibility of a westerly set due to a flood tide."

The above was the verdict of the Marine Court of Inquiry which sat yesterday to ascertain the circumstances of the grounding of the S.S. Changte at the Basian Straits recently on her way from Australia to Hongkong.

The Court comprised Commander Hole, R. N. (Retired), President; Lt. Commander E. H. C. Branson, R. N., Captain W. Savage, (Master of S.S. Bosworth); Capt. W. Irving (master of the S.S. Chinese Prince); Master A. S. Gordon (master of the S.S. Cape St. Francis).

The Master of the Changte (Captain Gambrell) was represented by Mr. R. A. Wadsworth.

Captain's Evidence

Giving evidence, Captain Gambrell said that between June 1 and 7 he was on a voyage from Thursday Island to Manila, and was working on a chart.

At about 8.10 a.m. on June 5 he was 64 miles north of the Jallese Island in the Banks Strait. At noon the next day he fixed the position of the ship which was 4 degrees 17' north and 120 degrees 48' east. He set a course from that point to pass 4 miles East of Matanal Point, his speed being then about 14 knots. At twilight the sky was overcast and Captain Gambrell took further observations.

Between 10.30 p.m. and 11 p.m. Captain Gambrell said he was on the Bridge and he then estimated at midnight by the ship's speed, her position, and came to the conclusion that the ship could carry on the same course until 1.30 a.m. on June 7. Witness was allowing a quarter of a knot more from 11 p.m. on June 6. Until midnight and from midnight until 1.30 a.m. he allowed a further 18 miles.

Witness left orders with the third officer who was then on duty to call him at 1 a.m. "I was on the bridge at 1 a.m. the second officer then being in charge. The weather at that period was raining with a slight drizzle, it previously being clear but overcast."

Sibego Island Light

"I should have been somewhere near the Light on Sibego Island at the entrance to the Basian Strait and expected to see to any time from 1 a.m. onwards. The Second officer had told me that there had been no rain until just after 1 a.m., but he had not seen the light."

"The light has a radius of 20 miles and in order to check up on my position I went into the Chart room and checking by the ship's speed found that she had covered 135 miles from noon till midnight on June 6."

"I added 6 miles to be on the right side and another 18 miles from midnight until 1.30 a.m., the total being 159 miles or within 12 miles of Sabado Light."

"Our position was two points to starboard bow and 25 minutes after entering the chart room I caught a momentary glimpse of the light. I then altered my course to north of the Sabado Light, the quartermaster at the moment calling out, 'She's north now, Sir.' I then decided to reach the limit of safety and gave orders for the ship to turn round and ordered 'starboard north,' the weather being still rainy with a calm sea."

"We hadn't been in that position for a minute when the Port Officer on the Bridge shouted 'Hard to Starboard' and I sighted what appeared to be breakers about one point on the port bow."

"I came out of the chart room and no sooner was I out than I felt the ship had grounded. The engines were stopped. The ship was headed No. 28, E. when she stuck. I put the engines slow

RICKMERS CASE

Decision Of The Full Court

Judgment was given by the Full Court yesterday in the appeal by Rickmers Rhederal, A. G. (Owners of the s.s. "Chaus Rickmers") against the refusal of Mr. Justice Wood, sitting in Chamber, to allow them to amend their statement of defence in four particulars in connection with their case with the Bank of Taiwan, and H.S.M.R. Kazeroni & Sons.

The first particular was the Defendants' application for leave to withdraw the admission that Messrs. Mackinnon MacKenzie & Co., who consigned certain opium to the defendant company, did so as agents for Kazeroni and Sons. The appeal on that issue failed.

The second and third points concerned the admission that certain provisions relied on in the Statement of Claim were "Customs Regulations in force in Shanghai at all times material to this action." Both these points were allowed.

The fourth point concerned Mr. Justice Wood's order striking out that part of the defence which pleaded restraint of rulers or peoples because the defendants failed to give particulars of the express orders of the Government of China in consequence of which the opium was confiscated. The appeal on that issue was allowed.

CHELSEA SHOW

Gold Medal Rock Gardens

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, June 8. The Chelsea Flower Show, which is being held in the Royal Hospital Gardens, was open yesterday to the public, and it attracted a large attendance without being oppressively crowded.

The sunny weather, tempered with a pleasant breeze, was particularly favourable for viewing the many gardens which have been laid out in the open, and which are always one of the most popular features of the exhibition. Only two have received gold medals this year, and both are rock gardens. The standard of the formal gardens is somewhat disappointing, but it has to be borne in mind that they are more seriously handicapped than the rock gardens by the limited amount of space available.

For the second year in succession, Messrs. Dartington Hall, Limited, have been awarded a gold medal for a rock garden. This exhibit is carried out in water-worn Devon limestone, and takes the form of a rocky ravine through which flows a mountain stream terminating in a pool. The great feature of this garden is the meticulous care with which the planting has been carried out. Hundreds of rosettes of the cobweb house leek form a cascade down the sides of the larger boulders, while it is difficult to believe that the close carpet of veronicas, campanulas, and rock pinks has not been established for some years.

Alpines.

The other gold medal rock garden is that of Messrs. G. G. Whitelegg, and is built of pleasantly coloured stone from the Cheddar Gorge. From near the top two mountain rills wind their way down to a rocky pool at the bottom, by the side of which are to be seen globe-flowers, bog-primulas, and the brilliant little monkey flower Mimulus "Watercress" Scarlet. The garden is well planted with attractive alpines, a pleasing touch being a fine clump of the salmon-pink Lewisia Howelli growing out of a large rock, and a miniature meadow carpeted with the bird's-eye primrose P. farinosa.

The principal feature of Messrs. Clarence Elliott's rock garden is the faithful representation of an alpine moraine which has been constructed and planted extremely well. Some brilliant patches of colour are occasioned by the inclusion of alpines such as Pentstemon Rozellii, Eriogonum alpinum, and Wahlenbergia, with which the pale blue of Campanula Allionii and Phyteuma comosum makes a good combination.

A silver cup was awarded to the Hocker Edge Gardens for a rock garden which is of a form well suited to the requirements of the majority of garden enthusiasts. It is stocked with a good selection of dwarf shrubs such as Japanese azaleas, and contains a good show of easily grown rock plants such as "rock violas".

Among the informal gardens in the open, that of Messrs. R. Wallace deservedly won a silver cup. Seen over a stretch of undulating turf, a high rock bank occupies the far corner. It is composed of some fine waterworn boulders of Westmorland stone and surmounted by an old plant of Taxus cuspidata, a particularly hardy species of yew from North America. Also used in this exhibit to advantage are several other conifers of a spreading type and suitable for draping rock-work, together with some large sized Japanese maples and a huge standard rhododendron in full bloom.

A simple but effective garden of an entirely informal nature is that of Messrs. Percy S. Cane. It consists of stretches of grass over which are grouped flowering trees and shrubs. The latter are supplemented by groups of Iris and of Lilium regale, a species of lily which has risen to popularity in a remarkably short time.

Formal Gardens.

Among the formal gardens, Messrs. Gazes are showing some wide herbaceous borders, well planted with hardy flowers which lead up to a raised terrace. At the back is a wall built in bricks of various shades. It has a semi-circular archway with a wrought-iron gate in the centre, and a garden house in the corner. A garden arranged on rather similar lines has been laid out by Messrs. Waters, but with a thatched garden house as the central feature.

No Chelsea Show would be complete without one of Messrs. Mac-

SECURITY AND REARMAMENT

Scene Shifters at Geneva

The international scene shifters are hard at work preparing the stage at Geneva for the next act of the disarmament drama. It will take them all their time to get ready if the Bureau of the Conference is to meet on April 10 as arranged.

Much has happened during the past week or two to clarify the issues, but little to remove the difficulties.

After interminable delays, the French reply to the British memorandum of January 29 has at last been published. Its text, running to more than 2,000 words, confirms the impression created during Mr. Eden's European tour that the Lord Privy Seal found the hardest part of his task in Paris.

The first thing to which the French Cabinet objects is the association of "immediate reductions of armaments imposed on certain Powers with immediate increases in armaments granted to other Powers." Following up this theme, "most explicit reservations" are made to the German claim for a regular army of, say, 300,000 men with a proportionate amount of war material.

Question of Security

Yet technical considerations pale into insignificance compared with the French political arguments. All are "dominated by the essential problem of guarantees of execution." It is a modern orientation of the old question of security. France wants the strongest assurances that "firm action" will be taken against any nation which may break the disarmament convention. The British proposals for consultation are "a step forward," but they are not enough.

At this point, the French Note appears to relapse into an obscurity so spontaneous as to be probably deliberate. The object is probably to leave the door open for further negotiation. Certainly Italy will be one of the countries consulted by Great Britain when the Cabinet has been able to digest all the implications of the French reply.

In conclusion, France emphasises that the League of Nations remains the only organisation capable of furnishing a collective guarantee of peace. There could be no better guarantee than Germany's return to Geneva.

Donald's grass gardens, the workmanship of which is always excellent. This year a rectangular lawn of perfect turf has been laid out with two small mountains and beds of ornamental grasses. A paved path bounds the lawn, and beyond are further borders containing foliage plants and grasses, backed with a yew hedge.

In the same section a representation of a bathing pool with a garden setting has been laid out by Messrs. Wauham Wood and Sons, Limited. Purification plant has been installed, which is housed in a shelter of an ornamental nature, while the aeration of the water is carried out by means of a stone jar, from which is gushed out into a stone basin.

Because of last year's hot summer, which caused the thorough ripening of flowering wood, there has been an exceptional amount of blossom seen on flowering trees and shrubs this spring, and, as might be expected, these subjects are being shown to particular advantage at Chelsea. Almost the whole of one side of the central avenue is devoted to their exhibition, which naturally helps to enhance the appearance of the grounds.

A gold medal group has been staged here by Messrs. Hilliers, made up of numbers of varieties of Japanese cherries, ornamental crab apples, and brooms in standard form. As the majority of these plants have long been over in most gardens, a high degree of cultural skill must have been necessary in order to show them in full bloom at Chelsea. A gold medal has also been awarded to Messrs. Charltons, of Rotherfield, for a similar group of trees and shrubs. In this, some very tall standard lilacs, bright-hued azaleas and rhododendrons play a prominent part. Among less familiar shrubs contained in this group is Hydrangea Sargentiana and a very good specimen of Corokia virgata with its twisted stems and starry yellow flowers.

Vegetables.

Several groups of vegetables are being shown this year, among

SHING MUN TRAGEDY

Lost of Six Lives Feared

Although the heavy rains that fell on Wednesday afternoon brought very welcome replenishment to our reservoirs, tragedy also came in its wake, for, according to a report from Shing Mun, six men who were engaged on the Gorge Dam sites is believed to have lost their lives as a result of the heavy downpour, and but for the gallant work of Mr. H. M. Findlay, a British engineer also engaged on the site, another workman might also have lost his life.

It was stated that as soon as the rain commenced to fall, the customary warning signal was given for all men to come out of the gorge which is so narrow that the water rises quickly and renders the gorge an extremely dangerous spot at any time when rainfall is abnormally heavy.

Ignored Warning

There were about forty men working in the gorge when the signal was given and all but five men came out of it. These five men were warned for the second time by the gorge foreman but they said that they thought the rain would soon abate and that they would be quite safe where they were.

In the short space of a few minutes, the water in the gorge began to rise at such an alarming rate that it was apparent the men were in grave danger, but nothing could be done for the men who ran to a small rock island with water rushing down on both sides of them.

It was indeed a piteous sight to see the men stranded on the rock, conscious of the danger they were in, and conscious also that although their comrades were in sight, nothing could be done for them. They were eventually swept off the island and carried through the tunnel, but one of them, more fortunate than the rest, was carried to the corner of the tongue trench where he was then out of the main swiftly flowing current, in a sort of backwater, and within reach of a derrick.

One of the engineers, Mr. Findlay, went down on the derrick and rescued him.

Two Bodies in Gorge

At first it was thought that the four men swept through the tunnel were the only victims, but when the flood had subsided, two bodies were found; leading to a fear that the total loss of life was six.

Rescue of the men when they ran to the island was unfortunately impossible, as the rocks were thirty feet too far away for the derrick to reach them.

which is Messrs. Suttons' exhibit, and this has gained a gold medal. The arrangement is extremely clever, with its elegant spires of tomatoes, peas, and beans, and the baskets with their great assortment of uncommon varieties, such as black-skinned potatoes, black Spanish radishes, purple-podded peas, the bright red tubers of Oxalis crenata, and the egg plants with fruits of the size of vegetable marrow.

In addition to the arrangement, the excellent condition of the specimens, as for example the large onions, is no less noteworthy. Although it could not be expected to compare with the latter exhibit, the group of vegetables staged by the Cheadle Mental Hospital is a remarkably good one and has received the Sutton vegetable cup for the best group of vegetables shown by an amateur.

Superb cultural skill has been shown by Messrs. Blackmore and Langdon, who have been given a gold medal for a mixed group of gladiolas, begonias, and delphiniums. The gladiolas and begonias are easily the largest and finest to be found in the show, while the delphiniums are seen in far better condition than is usually to be expected so early in the season. Some of the best spikes of the latter are those of "Sir Neville Pearson," having large blue and mauve blossoms, "Mrs. Foster Cluniffee" (double mauve), and "Duchess of Portland" (violet-blue). As well as the comprehensive collection of giant flowered begonias, of which "Marjorie Porton" and the deep red "Alan, Clarke" are outstanding examples, the same firm have used freely some of the basket begonias for the decoration of their group.

The Sherwood Cup, for the most meritorious exhibit in the show, has been awarded to Messrs. Carters Tested Seeds, Limited, for

LIFE AS FARMER

Dreadful Rumours Of Opium Executions

Taichow, Ku, June 9.

The farmers in Taichow county are now busy gathering the wheat crop. The yield is said to be good. Peace and plenty reign in the near future. Several weeks ago there was considerable anxiety among the agriculturists over the heavy fall of rain. It was freely predicted that one more day's rain would mean the complete destruction of the wheat crop. These dire prophecies were not realized and so Taichow can look forward to the usual food supply which is always less than the population needs—at least it is so distributed that all do not get enough.

The farmers of China, if not related by blood with those of other countries, certainly strongly resemble farmers of a different colour in their dispositions. They are always ready to say that all crops will fail. The weather, "that phenomenon about which they talk so much but about which they do nothing" (Mark Twain) is for the Chinese farmer an excuse for everything. He confidently believes that the weather is his constant and relentless foe. One might think it his best excuse for never doing farmers' complaint of their own laziness or their own foolish mistakes. They lay all their failures on the weather.

What a comfort it would be to men in other lines of work if they could carry their affairs out into the open where the winds and rains could beat upon them—then there would be no more confessions of weakness, or of foolhardiness. All could point out what might have happened had the weather been fair instead of cloudy or had the earth been damp instead of dry. There are advantages in following the plough which are not always apparent.

Talk of Railway Continues

The talk of "a railroad from Taichow to the Yangtze River continues" but there is perhaps a little lessening of the former enthusiasm. When the railroad is complete it will connect with all river launches and river steamers. A hulk will be anchored to Kao Kong and all the dangers attendant on grabbing a moving boat from a sampsa will be avoided. This railroad will unite the great centres of the world with Taichow and advantages will be evident to both the Occident and the Orient. What will be the effect in London when the citizens of that metropolis learn that they, after making the trip to Shanghai, can then take a river steamer to Kao An, and from there make the rest of the journey to Taichow by rail. The day may not be far distant when the World's Almanac will have listed as the largest city in the world—Taichow!

The Taichow Magistrate is doing some work on the city streets. The main street has been greatly improved and now this progressive official is turning his attention to some streets of smaller importance. Automobiles are not in use here but the citizens may not feel it necessary to follow the gradual developments of other countries. They may make one giant stride from wheelbarrows to aeroplanes. Who knows?

There is considerable excitement in this section of the province now because of a renewed inquisitiveness by the police into the habits of the people. Inquiry is being made as to who does and who does not enjoy the fumes of the opium pipe. Dreadful tales are being spread to the effect that some old offenders who have been given a chance to break off from their pleasant dreamings may have to pay for their continued indulgence with their lives. It would be a fearful thing if all the opium smokers in this county were executed. Floods and famines have in times past taken their toll of human life here but these calamities would be trifles compared to the destruction which could be caused by sending "all those who love the pipe" into another world suddenly with the aid of a gun and a bullet. Few would be left to ride the railroad.

ASSEMBLY IN SYNAGOGUES

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright).)

Kovno, June 20.

A special decree proclaimed by the Lithuanian Government on Wednesday strictly forbids any kind of assembly in synagogues except Jewish religious rites. The reason for the decree, believed in official circles, is that the synagogues have recently been used for political meetings, some of which consisted of boycott demonstrations against New Germany and protests against the British Palestine policy.—Transocean Kuo Min.

CABLE NEWS IN BRIEF

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright).)

Berlin, June 20.

The weekly report of the German Institute for Business Research, an official institution connected with the Reichs statistical service, publishes a leading article on Wednesday entitled "Postponement of Transfer." The more salient passage states "since September 30, 1933, the total amount of foreign indebtedness has probably been considerably reduced partly as a consequence of further depreciation of foreign currencies and partly as a result of repayments."

Interest obligations have correspondingly also been reduced so that the savings in foreign exchange due to the postponement of the transfer amounts to about 250 million marks for the second half of 1934. The temporary interruption of cash transfer means a considerable relief to the German capital balance for the current year and erects, in Germany a barrier against further withdrawals of gold and foreign exchange. Even this relief, however, will hardly be sufficient to balance the foreign exchange situation in Germany in the coming months. Unusually drastic measures will be necessary to prevent the exports from dropping still further below the imports. The transfer of payments can be resumed only when this problem is solved.—Transocean Kuo Min.

DEATH SENTENCE FOR OLD CRIME

Budapest, June 20.

Condign punishment was meted out on Wednesday for a crime committed in 1919 during the days of the Soviet Republic in Hungary under Bela Kun when the ring-leader of a group of desperadoes, named Gador, ordered six innocent farmers to be shot by Red Soldiers. When the Soviet's rule in Hungary was broken, Gador fled to Austria but when he tried recently to cross the frontier into Hungary again, he was recognised, arrested and tried.

The penal court at Miskolc on Wednesday sentenced Gador to death by strangling.—Transocean Kuo Min.

CONFINEMENT IN TOTAL DARKNESS

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright).)

Vienna, June 20.

Two National-Socialists were condemned on Wednesday by summary court to sentences amounting altogether to twenty six years. After six hours' deliberations, the court sentenced 21-year old Leopold Kann to twelve years' hard labour with confinement in total darkness and compulsion to sleep on bareboards once every three months, while the second accused, Anton Bretzinger, got fourteen years' hard labour.

The sole piece of damaging evidence the court possessed against the two National-Socialist accused was the ownership of a case containing explosive material.—Transocean Kuo Min.

KARIN GOERING'S FUNERAL

Eberswalde, June 20.

The burial service of the late Karin Goering took place solemnly on Wednesday when the Prussian Premier's wife was consigned to her final resting place. The Reich Chancellor, Adolf Hitler, and many members of the Cabinet attended to pay their last respects. Among those noticed at the ceremony was Prince August Wilhelm, brother of the ex-Crown Prince, who is now group leader of the Stormtroop detachments.—Transocean Kuo Min.
